CHINESE TAKE HEAVY TOLL OF ENEMY IN THE PROVINCE OF YUNNAN

Little Damage Is Done by Japanese Artillery Though Active Day and Night—Remnants of British Army Retreating From Burma Have Crossed Indian Border

CHUNGKING, May 16 (Saturday) (AP).—Chinese troops, battling the Japanese in the Tengyueh Lungling areas of Yunnan Province in the past week, have inflicted more than 4,000 casualties on the invaders, the Central News Agency reported today.

The Japanese were reported shelling Chinese positions on the east bank of the Salween River in a night and day pounding, but the agency dispatch from Paoshan, fifty-five miles from Lungling, said little damage was done.

CROSS INTO INDIA

NEW DELHI, India, May 15 (AP).—Remnants of the British army from Burma straggled across the border into India today while the Japanese pushed westward behind them and simultaneously probed deeper into China.

A military spokesman said the British force, now estimated to number hardly more than 5,000, had extricated themselves from a dan-

POWER BOATS ARE ENROLLED

Vancouver Island Squadrons Total Thirteen, With 350 Vessels Ready

The list of enrollees in the newly-formed Vancouver Island Power Boat Squadrons has been mounting steadily, Harold Husband, regional representative of the transit control office, announced yesterday.

The executive committee of the power boat squadrons, under the chairmanship of R. Halls, of Victoria, has been working steadily on the formation and organization of the squadrons, and report that the co-operation of small power boat owners all over the Island has been very keen.

The question of emergency gasoline requirements for these craft is at present being considered, Mr. Husband said.

THIRTEEN SQUADRONS

Thirteen squadrons have been enlisted, with bases at principal Island points, including Victoria Harbor, Oak Bay, Cadboro Bay, Brentwood Bay, Shoal Harbor, Canoe Cove, Cowichan Bay, Maple Bay, Nanaimo, Comox-Courtenay, and squadrons at Ganges and at Port Alberni are in the process of being organized.

Present enlistments total over 350 power boats, which are capable of transporting over 5,000 passengers at one time, Mr. Husband said, and these squadrons will be of inestimable value under organized controls in the emergency transportation picture for Vancouver Island.

Boats enrolled range in size from twenty-five to fifty feet in length, and for the most part would be operated by their owners, whose knowledge of local water and their own craft makes them particularly suitable for the tasks which may be allotted to them in time of action.

Seven Die in Bomber Crash

EUREKA, Calif., May 16 (AP).—A medium twin-motored United States Army bomber, operating under Navy supervision, crashed into the Pacific Ocean off the mouth of the Eel River eight miles south of here today, carrying all seven men aboard to their deaths.

Coast guard boats were sent to the scene from here but they found no sign of life.

Fourth Army headquarters at San Francisco said the plane carried an army officer, a navy officer, four army enlisted men and a sailor. Their names were not available.

MAIL FOR PRISONERS

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15 (AP).—Japanese planes, flying high over oft-raided Port Moresby, in New Guinea, dropped a packet of 400 letters from Australian prisoners in enemy-held territory, the Melbourne radio reported in a broadcast heard tonight by C.B.S. The letters were dropped April 28, the broadcast said.

NONE ESCAPE FROM R.A.F.

Three Mine Sweepers Hit Off French Coast—Attacking Nazi Downed

LONDON, May 15 (CP). — The Royal Air Force today attacked three German mine sweepers off the French Coast, hit them all, sank one, left another sinking and the third damaged while four Spitfires, including one piloted by a Canadian, knocked down a Dornier bomber off the East Coast of England.

A communique issued by the Air Ministry reported that a fleet of Spitfire fighters and Hurricane bombers spotted the Nazi mine sweepers steaming in line abreast off the Cherbourg Peninsula and attacked them.

One mine sweeper was hit amidships the communique said. It exploded and sank. Another was set afire and left sinking while the third suffered unspecified damage.

SHOT INTO SEA

Later, in the early morning, P.O. L. E. Hoksn of St. Catharines, Ont., teamed with three other fighter pilots to shoot down a Dornier bomber into the sea.

The Dornier, the only German aircraft spotted near Britain in daylight, was flying about 100 feet above the water when the four fighter pilots sighted it and dived, spraying it with bullets and shells.

The Nazi tried to evade them and gain height, but the fighters, all Spitfires, attacked again and forced him to pancake into the sea where he sank in a few seconds.

The Air Ministry reported that one of a small number of German aircraft which dropped bombs on the southeast coast of England last night was shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

It was disclosed also that a Hudson bomber attacked an enemy ship near Aalesund, Norway, Thursday afternoon, and was believed to have scored several hits on it despite fierce opposition.

DISASTER CAUSES TWELVE DEATHS

Provincial Police headquarters here today were advised twelve United States Army men, including two officers, were drowned yesterday near Fort St. John, B.C.

Reports reaching here by radio said the men lost their lives when a pontoon capsized. Five others reached safety.

Dragging operations are in progress. No other information was contained in the brief report.

It was assumed the men were United States engineering troops engaged on construction of the Alaska Highway.

McNARY WINS

PORTLAND, Ore., May 15 (AP).—Oregon voters gave an apparent victory to Senator Charles L. McNary, Senate Republican leader and vice-presidential candidate two years ago, in the primary election tonight.

Rescue at Sea by Plane

AFTER twelve days at sea on a lifeboat following the sinking of his ship in the North Atlantic, Terrence James Bradley, of New York, a seaman, was rescued by a United States patrol plane. In a weakened condition, he is shown being carried ashore. The plane is shown in the background. This is the first indication that planes were being used to effect the rescue of United States seamen. Joseph Dieseltiers, of New York, also on the liferaft, died as a result of the untold hardship. Their ship, of Panamanian registry, was torpedoed without warning on April 29.

But One Escapes Death or Burns

Three Torpedoes Hit Large American Cargo Vessel Off Mouth of Mississippi—Twenty-Seven of Crew Are Killed in Attack

NEW ORLEANS, May 15 (AP).—One of the boldest attacks yet made by Axis submarines along the United States and Gulf Coasts—the destruction by torpedoes of a large cargo vessel a short distance off the mouth of the Mississippi River—was announced today by the United States Navy.

Twenty-seven of the forty-one crew members were killed in the explosion and fire in the attack. The remaining crew members were critically or dangerously burned, with a single exception.

The attack occurred on May 12—about one and one-half miles from the river's mouth.

While waiting to enter the river, the ship was hit by three torpedoes in rapid succession. Most of the crew never reached the water. Survivors who got to the windward rail jumped and were picked up in about half an hour. Only seven bodies were recovered, and these were not immediately identified.

The ship was the fifth attacked in the Gulf of Mexico in less than a week, and the fourth lost. One ship was towed into port, although badly damaged. Three lives were lost in the previous attacks.

Mike Kuzma, of St. Paul, Minn., the least seriously burned survivor, was the hero of the sinking. Although he had no lifebelt, he managed to hold up two shipmates until taken aboard a rescue boat.

QUISLING VISITS FRONT

LONDON, May 15 (CP).—The Oslo radio announced today that Premier Vidkun Quisling, of the German-sponsored Norwegian regime, had just completed a six-day visit to the German-Russian front.

CALLED TO COLORS

MOSCOW, May 15 (AP).—The Red Army ordered eighteen-year-old youths, today to register on May 17 for their regular period of military service. This annual registration is preparation to the Autumn call to the colors. Besides the regular class of 1924, members of the classes of 1923 and 1922—nineteen and twenty-year-olds—who have not previously registered were ordered to do so.

"Gas Hogs" Get No Chance of Privacy

Extra Allotment Cards to Be Made Public Record—Will Identify Those Receiving Special Allowance—Order Applies to Eastern Motorists

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP).—The Office of Price Administration made things unpleasant for "gas hogs" tonight by deciding to blazon publicly the types of gasoline ration cards issued to Eastern motorists.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson quickly fell in line with President Roosevelt's opinion, voiced at a press conference earlier in the day, that extra-allotment gasoline cards should be a matter of public record.

Henderson said that an order would be issued tomorrow reversing the confidential status of gasoline rationing records and authorizing local rationing boards to "make available for public inspection as soon as practicable" all the records connected with gasoline rationing.

Some exceptions were stipulated, concerning Federal, military and law enforcement officers and agents whose duties depend upon secrecy, but the exemptions did not cover Senators and Congressmen.

This meant that the legislators who obtained "X" cards entitling them to unrestricted gasoline purchases on the strength of their official duties, would be identified.

BULLETINS

NAZI CLUB STONED

MEXICO CITY, May 16 (Saturday) (AP).—The German Club, in the heart of the capital, was stoned by a crowd of university students, aroused over the U-boat sinking of a Mexican ship. Police dispersed the youths without difficulty and no injuries were reported. The damage was limited to broken windows.

PLANES WRECKED

LONDON, May 16 (Saturday) (CP).—United States army bombers destroyed fifteen Japanese planes in Thursday's attack on the Northern Burma airdrome at Myitkyina, Reuter's said today in a New Delhi dispatch.

FIRE AT VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER, May 15 (CP).—A spectacular three-hour fire tonight destroyed a large storage shed and a quantity of machinery at the Overseas Wood Products, Ltd., plant here. No estimate of the damage could be obtained immediately.

MEXICAN LEADER CALLING FOR WAR

Senator Garcia Urges Immediate Session of Congress for Declaration Against Axis Powers

MEXICO CITY, May 15 (AP).—An extraordinary session of the Mexican Congress to declare war on the Axis was urged today by Senate Leader Leon Garcia, who said he would make such a motion at this afternoon's meeting of the Permanent Congressional Commission.

Garcia, spokesman for President Manuel Avila Comacho in the Upper Chamber, told newspapermen:

"In view of the extreme gravity of events provoked by the torpedoing of the Potrero Del Llano (a Mexican oil tanker), it is absolutely indispensable for our country to declare war on the Nazi-Fascist powers.

"I will propose that Congress be convoked with all urgency for an extraordinary session to discuss declaring war on the Axis, which I shall move."

INSURANCE UP

MONTREAL, May 14 (CP).—Recent sinkings in the St. Lawrence due to enemy submarine action has prompted a jump from 1½ per cent to 3 per cent in war risk rates on voyages from St. Lawrence River ports to Newfoundland or Canadian Atlantic ports, it was announced today by the Canadian War Risk Committee, which represents private companies here.

Malta Continues Taking Big Toll Of Axis Planes

VALETTA, Malta, May 15 (CP). — Five Axis planes were shot down and six damaged over Malta today without the loss of a single R.A.F. craft. A revised official tabulation showed twenty-one German planes destroyed or damaged over Malta yesterday, of which six bombers and five fighters were destroyed. Thus in the first fifteen days of May the enemy lost seventy-four planes definitely known to have been destroyed over Malta.

ALLIES BOMB BASE AT LAE

Surprise Attack Follows Punishing Raid on New Britain Centre

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Australia, May 16 (Saturday) (CP).—General MacArthur's Headquarters announced today that Allied planes bombed the airfield runway and buildings at the Japanese base of Lae, New Guinea, yesterday in a surprise attack which left large fires in its wake.

The attack on Lae followed Thursday's punishing raid on Rabaul, New Britain, northeast of New Guinea.

Earlier, reports to headquarters indicated that the Japanese, stung by the effectiveness of Allied planes operating in the New Guinea and New Britain areas, have increased considerably their aerial squadrons in those areas.

Further, the possibility that the Japanese might be having to use inexperienced pilots was seen by an Air Corps spokesman.

REMARKABLE SCORE

Reporting that bombers on a raid on Rabaul, New Britain, Wednesday, shot down seven of seventeen Japanese fighter planes which intercepted them, he said that it was a remarkable score for such unescorted aircraft against the ultra-manoeuvreable fighters and that it raised the question of the experience of the Japanese pilots.

One hint of the increased Japanese strength was seen yesterday in the second of two quick raids on Port Moresby, southern New Guinea city. Thirty-five Japanese planes—the largest number of aircraft in one unit the enemy has yet sent over New Guinea—dropped bombs from a great height after thirteen fighters strafed the airport in the first short raid.

The size of the force indicated that the Japanese would go to great lengths to keep the Allies from using Port Moresby as an air operations base. The bombers, however, did not hit a single worthwhile objective.

PRISONERS SET FREE BY FORCE

Quebec Crowd Liberates Trainees Jailed for Overstaying Their Leave

ASBESTOS, Que., May 15 (CP).—Police Commissioner Alfred Laflamme said today that two trainees who had overstayed their leave were still at liberty, after a crowd of Asbestos residents released them from the town jail, Wednesday night.

Commissioner Laflamme said that a crowd of 700 or 800 released the men by smashing the lock on the jail, and added that the gathering was under the impression that the men had been taken into custody by military police for service overseas.

The people dispersed quietly, the commissioner said, after he and Mayor Joseph Isabelle told them that the two men had not returned to camp when their leave expired on January 10. Laflamme spoke for thirty minutes and told the gathering that the men should have returned when their leave expired and that they were not being taken for overseas service.

Four Burned by Quebec Explosion

BEAUHARNOIS, Que., May 15 (CP).—Four men were burned when an explosion occurred in the St. Lawrence alloys and metal plant here, today. They were taken to nearby Montreal, where they are being treated at hospital. Andrew Turnbull, superintendent, said the explosion occurred in one of the grinding sheds early this afternoon.

BANS TIRE HOARDING

OTTAWA, May 15 (CP).—Hoarding of bicycle tires will be prohibited under the tire rationing order announced yesterday by Munitions Minister Howe, the Department of Munitions and Supply said today. The order provides that at no time may the owner possess more than two tires and two tubes for any one bicycle.

RUSSIANS DRIVE FOR KHARKOV: SMASH AT NAZIS' SECOND LINE

Destroy 400 Enemy Tanks in Three Days and Still Advancing—Forty Planes Knocked Down—Bitter Fighting in Crimea—German Losses Described as Enormous

From Europe Day by Day—

THE TIMES, London

News and Comment on International Events selected from The Times daily and published in The Daily Colonist by special arrangement with The Vancouver Daily Province.

(Copyright, 1942, by Southam Co.)

LONDON, May 15 (By Cable).—Soviet troops continue to advance in the Kharkov front where operations are now developing, says The Times military correspondent, on a major scale. Outer German defences here have already been penetrated and Red troops are attacking the second line through a widening gap. The Germans admit their forces are fighting defensively against strong Russian thrusts. They have already lost heavily in tanks.

The Times' Moscow correspondent describes the Red army as a powerful one and say it is blasting the Germans out of strongly prepared positions. Soviet artillery is especially deadly. Russians have stormed several hills and troops in high spirits have driven the foe out of village after village. Dispatches to Red Star, Soviet army newspaper, describe the vigor with which the Russian offensive has been launched. The German front was pulverized by the fire of Russian guns and heavy mortars. Tanks encircled Nazi strong points, reduced them and joined the main forces in deepening the break-through.

Nazis panicked in one place and abandoned guns and vehicles. Meanwhile powerfully escorted Soviet bomber squadrons were striking heavily at Nazi airfields to keep down air support for the enemy.

Though the Russians have lost part of their Kerch front they are powerfully counter-attacking there as the Germans themselves admit. There is indeed deep disappointment in Berlin says the Stockholm correspondent at the slow progress at Kerch coupled with heavy losses. Grim Bolshevik resistance has frustrated German hopes of lightning results and of rehabilitating the shattered prestige of "invincible" German fighting machines. The Nazis apparently used everything they had in the Crimea in the attempt to capture Kerch, yet their gains took them five days to achieve, their losses were great and they did not succeed in breaking the Soviet front. The Russians still hold Southern Crimea with Sebastapol. Even if in the end the Germans capture Kerch, this relatively minor operation does not augur well for their prospects on the mainland.

On Kalinin, Leningrad and Lake Ilmen fronts both sides are piling up forces for small scale surprise blows. Editorially, dealing with the reluctance of Italians, Bulgars, Ru-

Nazi Airmen Who Escaped Taken Again

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., May 15 (CP).—Two Nazi air force lieutenants who escaped from Bowmanville prisoner-of-war camp two days ago were back in custody here tonight having been captured at different points today. One was captured by railway workers in Canadian National Railways yards at Belleville, sixty miles east of here, while the other was taken by military police in Toronto Union Station. Toronto is forty miles west of Bowmanville.

Captured at Belleville was Lieut. Friderich Oeser who has three getaways from the Bowmanville camp to his credit. It was the first escape for Lieut. Aberhard Wildermutch, who was captured in Toronto.

Soviet Airmen Sink Three Ships Including Transport

MOSCOW, May 16 (Saturday) (AP).—Red Army troops, beating a bloody path over the approaches to the great Ukraine industrial city of Kharkov, have destroyed or damaged more than 400 Nazi tanks in three days and still are advancing on that key to Germany's southern defences, the Russians announced early today.

On the Kerch Peninsula the Soviet midnight communique said that Russian troops defending that approach to the Caucasus oil fields "continued stubborn fighting."

"In the Kharkov direction our troops carried out offensive battles and are advancing," the communique said. "Our troops destroyed 255 guns, damaged over 250 tanks, and brought down forty enemy planes."

SINK NAZI SHIPS

No other significant changes occurred on the long Russian front, but in the Barents Sea the Russians reported their airmen sank three enemy ships, including a transport.

Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's battle-hardened veterans, supported by Russian-manned British and American tanks and planes, were reported smashing hard at the German secondary lines before Kharkov.

The Russians said more than 250 tanks were damaged in yesterday's fighting in addition to at least 150 knocked out in the previous two days. A supplementary communique also said that Red airmen destroyed or damaged 100 more Nazi tanks on Thursday in "various sectors of the front"—not making it clear whether

GIVING RUSSIA WAR MATERIALS

Roosevelt Declares Shipments Are Coming Along All Right—Increase Noted

WASHINGTON, May 15 (CP). — American shipments of war supplies to the Russians, now locked in a death grip with the Germans on the southern sector of the long eastern front, are coming along all right, President Roosevelt announced today at his press conference.

At the same time the President announced that lend-lease aid to all countries amounted to $677,000,000 in April, the first time since the policy went into effect in March, 1941, that the $600,000,000 mark had been crossed.

MATERIAL INCREASE

The United States has poured $3,835,000,000 since March, 1942, into the war effort of the anti-Axis nations in the form of lend-lease assistance. Not only has the dollar total increased month by month, but the proportion of fighting weapons to food, drugs, raw materials and industrial materials has increased sharply so that today the major part of the aid is in the form of finished munitions of war.

ASK PROBE BY FIRE MARSHAL

Series of Fires Cause Heavy Loss in Counties of Ontario

LINDSAY, Ont., May 15 (CP).—A thorough investigation by provincial police of four fires that caused damage estimated at more than $500,000 in Victoria and Haliburton Counties, in the last few weeks, was under way tonight following the latest in the series—one at Minden, fifty miles north of here, that caused damage of more than $100,000.

"Many of the people are demanding an immediate investigation by a fire marshal," said Provincial Constable W. Hendron, of Minden. "However, we do know that the fire today, in Minden, started in Brintnell's Bakery, in which an overnight oven fire had been laid."

Eight buildings were destroyed in the Minden fire, which swept part of the business section. Villagers saved the other half of this section by erecting barricades of water-soaked canvas over store fronts on the opposite side of the street to the blaze. Minden is sixteen miles from Kinmount, where a fire last month wiped out the business section.

Recently, several houses were burnt in Gelbert and one house in Coboconk, both neighboring villages of Minden.

Men Called for Training for Army Cannot Join Navy or Air Force

OTTAWA, May 15 (CP).—The National Defence Department announced tonight that after May 20 men called out for training under the provision of the National Resources Mobilization Act will not be permitted to transfer from the army to the navy or the air force after they have reported to an army training centre.

The announcement added that the navy and air force will discontinue recruiting in army training centres.

Reason for the change in procedure, the departmental statement said, is the expansion of army activities.

The statement continued: "The mobilization of the 7th and 8th Divisions, and of special units, calls for a large increase in the number of men suitable to train as tradesmen. The army has particular need of men of this type just now in connection with mechanized and special army equipment."

FUEHRER FIRST

LONDON, May 16 (Saturday) (CP).—Norwegian teachers who escaped to England said today they had been ordered in German-occupied Norway to teach pupils a Nazi version of the Fifth Commandment — "Honor thy father, thy mother, above all thy fuehrer."

Dominion Explores Potential Oil Fields

Munitions Minister Howe Tells House Government Examining Tar Sands of Alberta—Peace River Area Mentioned for Possible Production

OTTAWA, May 15 (CP).—Examination of Northern Alberta tar sands in the Fort McMurray area is being conducted with a view to immediate development to meet wartime fuel demands, Munitions Minister Howe told the House of Commons today.

The minister's statement came in the course of debate on the war appropriation bill resolution after John R. MacNicol (Con., Toronto-Davenport) had said reports indicated that at least 750,000,000 tons of bituminous sand could be mined by open-cut methods.

Mr. MacNicol said surveys had indicated that the Fort McMurray, Alta., area contained 1,000,000,000 barrels of oil. When the whole tar sand area, including the Peace River district, was considered, an estimate of 100,000,000,000 barrels had been made, Mr. MacNicol said.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. House leader, said that Canadian prestige in the United States was not as high as he had hoped it would be. On a visit to Michigan he had been able to give the facts concerning alleged Canadian opposition to the Canadian Commando Hardened for Action

Entire Army Being Trained in Offensive Tactics—Use Live Ammunition—Leaps Twenty Feet From Cliff—Blacken Faces at Night

SOMEWHERE IN BRITAIN, May 15 (AP).—Brisk, efficient Lieut.-General H. D. G. Crerar said today that Canada's entire army of more than 230,000 men in Britain is being given Commando-type training with the aim that it will spearhead the eventual Allied attack.

"We are shifting from defensive to offensive and building an army that can establish a bridgehead and hold it," the fifty-three-year-old commander of a corps in the Canadian army said in an interview in which he revealed that every paymaster, cook, infantryman and officer is being given the same training as Britain's famous raiding forces.

ON LAND AND SEA

Key Canadian officers have been to Commando training headquarters for study and now have established a school giving the same type training with a few more arduous North American embellishments. Training includes one month land and one month sea operations.

Because a large proportion of Canadian troops are natural woodsmen accustomed to living outdoors, many of the preliminary Commando courses used in training Britain's city-bred troops are unnecessary for men from the Western Hemisphere.

"While the men are being given Commando training they are still part of regular army units and function as such except on special occasions," General Crerar explained.

HARD-HITTING UNITS

With a steady flow of American tanks and British and Canadian equipment, the Canadian army has become one of the hardest-hitting offensive units in the British Isles. It is fully motorized with a high proportion of tank and armored units.

General Crerar, who formerly was chief of the Canadian general staff, is a close student of German, British and American army methods, and his corps organization closely resembles the self-sufficient German shock troop fighting units which smashed their way into France through the Low Countries.

"Every battalion is capable of being made self-sufficient and able to carry out a complete operation by itself," the general explained.

"When necessary, each battalion could have its own anti-tank unit, motorcyclists, scout cars, armored cars and anything else it might need to carry through an operation."

GERMANY'S SYSTEM

This type of fighting unit enabled the Germans to smash holes in French, Yugoslav and Greek defences, then keep driving through without waiting for isolated artillery or supply units to catch up.

Every soldier in every fighting unit of the Canadian army is being equipped with as much firepower as can effectively be supplied with ammunition—the limit being only what the individual soldier and means of transport can carry into battle.

One Canadian staff officer summed up the situation: "We are past the stage of worrying about what the Germans are going to do to us. Now it is the Germans' time to worry about what we are going to do to them."

Major J. S. P. Armstrong, forty-one-year-old former Toronto insurance salesman, who is in command of the Commando school, said that men who were Boy Scouts in their schooldays are the best Commando material.

ALL PICKED MEN

Men at the school were picked from the Seaforth Highlanders, the West Nova Scotia Regiment, the Royal 22nd Regiment and the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Major Armstrong and his second in command, Major Frank Courtney, of Halifax, member of Canada's 1932 Olympic four-oared rowing team at Los Angeles, went through the regular British Commando course and then returned to set up the Canadian system.

First part of the training was the obstacle course at "Graveyard."

With rifles and full packs, submachine and Bren guns, a squad of men was forced to jump a twenty-foot cliff, rush through barbed wire over a waterhole, scale a thirty-foot cliff hand over hand up a rope with guns on their backs, dive in and out of a dozen foxholes at full speed, jump over another twenty-foot cliff and take cover.

"We don't make them jump anything over twenty feet (equivalent to a two-story building)," the major said regretfully as the squad of men, sweat pouring from their faces, raced at full speed through the course while officers roared: "Faster, faster, keep low. Down, dammit, down."

LIVE AMMUNITION

"If they don't keep them down we shoot over them with live ammunition," Major Armstrong said. "Get them used to it."

Live ammunition is used in all Commando exercises.

At "Hell's Haven" an assault landing was in progress as Commandos, chest deep in icy seas, charged ashore firing rifles and mortars through a smoke screen on the rocky beach.

In "Bloody Gorge"—a heavily-wooded glen—grim-faced soldiers with sub-machine guns slipped silently through the woods, firing a burst at targets which were hidden behind rocks and trees, while instructors yelled incessantly: "Faster, faster, less noise!"

At "Slaughterhouse" a company was storming a blockhouse with live grenades.

At night, activity increased with black-faced patrols splashing through icy seas while tracer bullets ripped overhead and grenades bombed.

Every Canadian graduate of the school must not only know how to fire every British weapon, but every German one as well.

BEHIND the scenes in Oak Bay's air raid rehearsal north of Oak Bay Avenue, Wednesday night, organizational heads directed a force of some 300 workers from the new control centre in the Oak Bay Municipal Hall, with successful results. The control centre was completed recently and used for the first time this week. Top, seen at the operations table in the main room, left to right, are: Dr. W. P. Musgrave, at the far end of the table, is Miss M. Leiper, in charge of the operational wall maps; and to his right is Miss Frances Watt. In the bottom picture, left to right, are Miss Jean Finlay, Miss K. Cave, Miss Joyce Richards and Miss M. RUSSIANS DRIVING TOWARD KHARKOV these were in addition to the Kharkov offensive.

GUERRILLAS ACTIVE

Russian guerrillas operating behind the Nazi lines were credited with destruction of two railroad bridges and derailment of two enemy troop trains in which more than 700 Germans were killed.

Along a wide front (some British commentators pictured it as forty to fifty miles) his troops had crossed the Donets River to the west and village after village outlying the great steel centre was falling to his arms, said the army organ Red Star.

The Moscow radio announced that among the newly captured positions were heights of strategic importance before Kharkov.

"Our troops are inflicting blow after blow on the enemy and making successful advances," said this announcement. "The offensive spirit of our troops is rising every minute. The operation is developing into an irresistible drive."

LITTERED WITH DEAD

German losses were described in Soviet accounts as enormous; the roads leading from the broken German first line into Kharkov were littered with Nazi dead, smashed tanks and cannon.

Some 400 miles to the south of this action—on the Kerch Peninsula in the Crimea—other Russian forces were fighting to hold the positions to which they had fallen back in their second forced retirement in that area.

Of that front, the afternoon communique of the Soviet command said merely that the most stubborn battling is continuing. Of Kharkov it announced:

"Soviet troops continued their offensive operations."

Before Kharkov, the front line dispatches of Red Army correspondents said: Timoshenko's advance is increasing hourly in speed, although the German command was casting its reserve troops into the line at the moment they arrived, in semi-exhausted state, from their forced marches from the rear.

DEFEAT FOR HITLER

Despite the fact that the grand objective—Kharkov itself—had not yet been reached, Red Star declared that Hitler had suffered "another heavy defeat" along the approaches to the city because of his vast losses in men and machines.

Aloft as well as afield the Russians claimed to command the situation. Soviet quarters reported that a squadron of Stormers in a single engagement, destroyed thirty Nazi planes on the ground and shot down five German fighters which sought to intercept them.

(Reports from neutral centres indicated the Germans had been compelled to withdraw dive bombers from the Kerch battle in an effort to halt the Russian tank advance on Kharkov.)

Just east of both the Kerch and Kharkov battlegrounds, the Soviet rear continued to send forward an orderly flow of troops and supplies, apparently little hampered by German aviation.

Men arriving in Moscow during the day from Baku, the great Caucasian oil centre, reported that the Caucasus and Eastern Ukraine showed few signs of enemy bombing; that plenty of Russian reserves were in evidence and that Russian transport was moving smoothly.

DRIVEN FROM CITY

LONDON, May 16 (Saturday). (CP)—German troops occupied all save the harbor area of the city of Kerch at the eastern end of the Crimea, but a Russian counter-attack promptly drove them out of the town, Reuter's said today in a dispatch from "the German frontier."

Red troops began their counter-attack at Yenikale on the north-eastern extremity of the peninsula where they had been backed against Kerch Strait, the dispatch said.

A heavy artillery barrage was laid down, and then Soviet tanks and infantry were reported to have overrun hastily established Nazi defence points within the city.

Heavy rains were reported to be handicapping the Axis mechanized movement outside Kerch.

manians and Hungarians to fight on the Eastern front. The Times says they are less certain Hitler is going to win. Also, they are hoping that if the Allies win, they will be too exhausted to interfere with Balkan countries territorial gains secured by their subservience or perfidy. It is notable that recently Quisling Governments of Rumania, Croatia and Slovakia permitted press attacks on Hungry and encroachments of her territorial magnates.

The Chinese High Command announces, says The Times' Chungking correspondent, that heavy fighting proceeding for Tengyuen fifty miles west of Poashan, ancient trading centre in the mountains of the Chinese Province of Yunnan. Japanese are trying to capture it so as to cross the Salween River north of the Burma Road. The enemy has evidently brought up heavy reinforcements to enable him to resume the advance into China. Air offensives by the Royal Air Force are giving valuable help to General Alexander's retreating forces in Chindwin River valley. Bombers have raided Akyab and bombed Japanese aircraft there. From Delhi, it is reported Chinese armies with headquarters at Chungking consist of two hundred divisions organized into fifty armies and well equipped for guerrilla warfare.

Thirteen Nazi troop-carrying aircraft, shot down over the North African coast by a Royal Air Force squadron which lost only a single aircraft, contained four hundred German soldiers sent as reinforcements to General Rommel. Other enemy aircraft as well as two Messerschmitts destroyed were damaged. Transport planes were sent hurtling into the Mediterranean at a distance of half a mile from each other. The Royal Air Force was commanded by an Australian who is one of the outstanding pilots of the Middle East.

How heavy have been civilian losses in air-raids in Britain during Nazi "reprisal" raids on Exeter, Bath, Norwich and York is shown by figures for April—Killed, 938, injured, 998. Total killed in last year's great raids on English cities during April was 6,065.

Japanese have arrested 500 Dutch citizens in Netherlands East Indies. Few references to Singapore are now made in Japanese broadcasts and none to the fate of thousands of Europeans interned there. Recently at a public ceremony in Singapore thirty-six Indian and Malay residents, but no Chinese, were commended for the help they had given Japanese invaders. Five shipyards have been reopened and it is alleged the great Singapore floating dock has been repaired. Teaching Japanese has been made compulsory in Malayan schools.

Referring to the need of improvement in British news in United States The Times' diplomatic correspondent says Britain's great effort in war is only partly understood in America. Premier Churchill's broadcast helped by showing how the Empire had fought alone for a whole year. But more is needed as was shown by misapprehension about the recent criticism of the Churchill administration. In the United States this was not understood for, what it was—incontestable evidence of Britain's fighting spirit.

FEW UNEMPLOYED

LONDON, May 15 (CP).—For the first time in thirty years Britain's unemployment has dropped below the 100,000 mark. Figures compiled April 15 showed male unemployed were 55,365, and women, 34,509. Just prior to the war the figures were well over 1,500,000.

FOOD SUPPLIES ARRIVE SAFELY

Polish Ambassador Cables Message to Red Cross In Toronto

TORONTO, May 15 (CP).—Stanislaw Kot, the Polish Ambassador to the Soviet Union, today notified Red Cross officials here that supplies of food and clothing for Polish citizens in Russia have arrived safely, Jackson Dodds, Central Council chairman, said today.

"First cases of your supplies have already arrived, in good order," the cable read. "We are very touched by your interest in the fate of Polish citizens in the U.S.S.R., and they have asked me to express to you their heartiest thanks."

Supplies sent by the Red Cross included chocolate concentrates, powdered and condensed milk, and clothing for women and children, Mr. Dodds said.

Mr. Dodds announced that Prince Edward Island, having reached its objective in the first three days of the national campaign to raise $9,000,000 to carry on the organization's 1942 activities, had increased its quota by 50 per cent. Saskatchewan headquarters today reported excellent initial results and assured the national headquarters the provincial objective would be reached.

Large donations announced today included: B.C. Electric Company, $7,500; B.C. Telephone Company, $6,250; Canadian International Paper Company, $4,000; Royal Trust Company, $4,000, and McColl-Frontenac Company, $2,500.

Eagles Sponsor New District Under Capt. Proudfoot—Sectors Organized—Roof Spotters Needed

A new metropolitan A.R.P. district for downtown Victoria, sponsored by the Fraternal Order of Eagles, View Street, was formed last night under District Warden Capt. D. J. Proudfoot, deputy civilian protection officer for Victoria.

At a meeting at the Eagles' Home, View Street, district headquarters, W. Bridgewood was named deputy district warden. Three sector wardens were also named. D. Easler will head Sector "A," J. B. Taylor, Sector "B," and J. Wright, Sector "C."

There are forty-eight wardens already signed up, all of them Eagles, and forty-two of the forty-eight last night joined a first-aid class to be started immediately.

There is, however, a grave need for roof spotters for downtown buildings, Captain Proudfoot said, in appealing for volunteers. Unless sufficient spotters can be obtained, owners of buildings will have to find their own roof spotters, he said.

The next meeting will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m., at the View Street headquarters.

gerous salient in the Chindwin Valley of Northwest Burma, escaping a Japanese attempt to get between them and the Indian frontier.

Another small British force which had been left far behind in the port town of Akyab to do demolition work has been evacuated to India by sea.

CONSOLIDATING HOLD

British bombers again attacked Japanese barges on the Chindwin River, and United States Army flyers from India bombed the Myitkyina airdrome in North Burma yesterday for the second day in a row, but the Japanese were busily consolidating their hold in Burma.

As the Chinese announced loss of Tengyueh, important caravan town in Western Yunnan Province, the threat to China appeared the most serious in nearly five years of stubborn warfare against the Japanese invaders.

Chinese Mission Has Anniversary

The Chinese Presbyterian Mission Church last night celebrated the anniversary of its founding with a service attended by the Moderator of Victoria Presbytery, Rev. J. Lewis McLean; the Moderator of Synod, Rev. Thomas McAllister, and Rev. David Smith, Vancouver, superintendent of missions.

Chinese members of the church and their Canadian friends attended the service in large numbers. To mark the event, the present church building at Blanshard and North Park Streets was remodeled and enlarged.

Rev. M. Fleming, who has had charge of the congregation for thirty years, has received letters and telegrams of greetings from all over Canada and the United States.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 15 (AP).—James Harper, sixteen-year-old Hill Military Academy student, who was wrapped beneath a 1,500-pound boulder in a cavern for thirteen hours, died shortly before noon today. The boulder fell on Harper yesterday afternoon as he explored a cavern in the rocky butte on which the academy is located. It fell across his thighs and pelvis, pinning him against a narrow ledge.

British Delegation Here for Air Talks

Arrives From England by Plane to Take Part in Ottawa Conference — United States Party Is Expected Today and Sunday

OTTAWA, May 15 (CP).—As fully trained fighting airmen move into the United Kingdom, training operations will have to move out, Air Marshal A. G. Garrod, air member for training in the Royal Air Force, said here today on his arrival for the Ottawa Air Training Conference next week.

The senior service member of a United Kingdom delegation which includes almost all the Air Ministry, Air Marshal Garrod said Canadian airmen are doing a great job in air operations based on Britain.

Within a week of Air Minister Power's announcement that more operational training for air crews will be given in Canada, Air Marshal Garrod said more British air crews will come to Canada for training.

"Great Britain is the fortress, the front line and the battlefield," he said. "As more and more squadrons are formed we will find it necessary to do more and more of our training outside."

ARRIVE BY PLANE

The British party, complete except for the chief of the delegation, Capt. Harold Balfour, parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Air, arrived by plane after a fifteen-hour trip across the Atlantic.

Capt. Balfour is already on this side of the Atlantic and expected in Ottawa during the week-end, in time for the opening informal discussions of the conference Monday. At these the agenda will probably be settled. A formal opening session with broadcast speeches is set for Tuesday, after which the delegations will divide up into committees and get down to business behind closed doors.

In addition to Canada twelve of the United Nations have definitely named representatives at the conference. They are the United Kingdom, the United States, Australia, New Zealand, China, Norway, Netherlands, Poland, South Africa, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia and Greece.

U.S. DELEGATION

The British were the first large delegation to arrive from abroad and the United States delegation, also large, is expected Sunday or Monday. Some of the smaller powers are being represented by officials permanently resident in Ottawa.

Air Minister Power, at a press conference today, stated the objective of the conference is to attain the greatest possible degree of co-ordination in air training and in the use of trainees on completion of training.

The minister declined to state what submissions the Canadian Government will make to the conference and said the agenda is under negotiation and subject to final revision, probably Monday.

VOLUNTEERING ON B.C. FARMS

School Students to Number Of 803 Have Applied to Work in Fields

Some 803 school students between the age of thirteen and fifteen, and upwards, have volunteered already for work on British Columbia farms and orchards this season, Hon. H. G. Perry announced yesterday. Many others are expected to apply before the schools close. The consent of principals and school trustees are required in all cases.

Up to date, 533 high school students of fifteen years of age or over have volunteered in the Okanagan district for work in fruit orchards and farms there, Mr. Perry said. To that are added 270 students between thirteen and fourteen years of age who have volunteered in other areas to work on farms.

Registration is continuing in each school district, with reports not yet available from most centres, the Minister of Education explained.

GOVERNMENT IS LOOKING FOR OIL

Alaska Highway and in respect to the operation of United States military airplanes into the northern part of Alberta.

USE OF HIGHWAYS

The C.C.F. leader added that Canada had been criticized by Representative John D. Dingle in the United States House of Representatives for failure to permit United States trucks to use Canadian roads when carrying supplies from Michigan to Buffalo and eastwards. If use of Canadian roads was necessary to facilitate the movement of United States war supplies, Mr. Coldwell said he thought every facility should be given American trucks to pass through Canada, but he thought no group should be allowed to use the war as a lever to gain such a concession.

Mr. Howe said representations for opening the Canadian roads would be considered, but the proposal was to use the Canadian highways as a "bridge" and the passing trucks would yield nothing to the communities along their route in Canada.

He said he agreed that the war had placed the question on a different footing.

Finance Minister Ilsley intervened in the debate to say that certain interests had urged in the past that Canadian highways be made available for shipments of goods in bond by truck. He said the objection as seen by National Revenue Department officials was that, while goods in bond transported by train were almost constantly under observation, similar goods carried by truck could not be kept under constant view.

OIL CONSUMPTION

Mr. MacNicol said that about one-half of the oil produced in Canada was required to operate Air Defence Department aircraft in Canada alone. Requirements of army vehicles were estimated at more than 100,000 gallons a day. Oil supplies of the United Nations in the Far East had been lost and the Germans were driving for Russian supplies in the Caucasus.

One small plant was operating in the Fort McMurray tar sands area, about 300 miles north of Edmonton, and by direct pipeline he believed it was not more than 250 miles.

Mr. MacNicol said he was interested in the development of Canadian resources and he did not care what it cost him to travel in the course of an investigation such as he had made of the tar sands.

"There is nothing in this personally for me," he said. "If I cannot do something for Canada when I am here, I am going to quit this House."

Mr. Howe said he believed Canadians had looked on the tar sands in the past as a reserve of oil to be developed in the future when more accessible supplies were exhausted.

"But today we think of that same area as a source of immediate oil production provided the problems connected with its development can be solved rapidly and with some degree of certainty," Mr. Howe said.

STUDY OIL SANDS

An intensive study of the tar sands was underway, organized by the Munitions and Supply Department and assisted by leading oil engineers. Mining of the sand itself was one of the major problems not fully worked out.

The minister added that a report was being prepared for the Government and it would advise whether a development should be undertaken at this time, what its extent should be, and whether the Government should proceed with a pilot plant or could undertake development immediately on a considerable scale. The report was expected shortly and "appropriate action will be taken."

Study also was being given the oil shale deposits of New Brunswick as a source of oil, and arrangements had been made to develop wells on the lower Mackenzie River at Fort Norman, N.W.T. Additional wells were being drilled at Fort Norman, refinery capacity was being increased and a short pipeline was being installed to carry oil to the location of the Alaska Highway.

Arrangements were being made for a thorough exploration of possible oil resources of the Peace River block of British Columbia.

PADRES IN PLANTS

Appointment of chaplains at munitions plants to speak to workers at the noon hour Sundays was advocated by Rev. Dan McIvor (Lib., Fort William).

These speakers could "talk good Christian democratic common sense to them and give them something to think about which will encourage them to sweat up to their jobs and do the work the minister expects them to do."

Mr. Coldwell said he had been disturbed by information that eighteen Douglas bombers owned by the Royal Norwegian Air Force in Canada had been sold to the Government of Peru and were exported after being found unsuitable for the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Air Force to which they were offered first.

He said he believed that airplanes of any type would have been of use in fighting in the Far East, and it struck him as strange the machines sold to Peru last year could not have been used somewhere in the war effort.

He had learned that prior to June, 1941, export permits were granted for the shipment of ten Fleet training aircraft to Portugal.

Until United Nations' requirements were met completely there was good reason for refusing to supply neutrals with war equipment. There were no guarantees that materials sent to neutrals were not being reshipped, or replacing materials shipped to nations with which Canada was at war.

TRAFFIC MONOPOLY

Dealing with the opening of Canadian roads to United States trucks, Mr. Howe said a group of Canadians was "promoting this monopoly in transportation across this particular stretch of territory."

The minister added: "They were very active in Canada for two or three years and then they discovered that much more effective propaganda in Canada could be carried out from the United States."

The sponsor of the project had conceived the idea that a material saving in transportation costs could be worked out by diverting highway traffic between Buffalo and Detroit over Canadian highways, and the shorter distance via Canadian soil would permit a profit being made by whoever had a franchise to operate over the shorter distance, Mr. Howe said.

Mr. Howe said the Board of Transport Commissioners' chairman, Col. J. A. Crosy, was making an investigation on behalf of the Canadian Government on the situation and action might be considered by the Government.

Canada had facilitated the Alaska Highway construction and the understanding was that the route to Alaska was free to the use of United States military planes. One civilian plane had entered Canada bound for the North on work for the United States army and had been delayed for four days because no one in Washington had asked Canada for permission for this machine to go North. When the facts were made known the plane was given immediate permission to proceed.

HELPING AMERICA

When Canada was at war and the United States at peace, isolationist elements had thought it "good business" unfairly to criticize Canada and its war effort, Mr. Howe said. He believed everyone in an official capacity in the United States appreciated what Canada had done, and the Dominion, further advanced in war production, had been able to help the United States greatly since it entered the war.

Every House member should make use of every opportunity to speak in the United States and make clear what Canada had done.

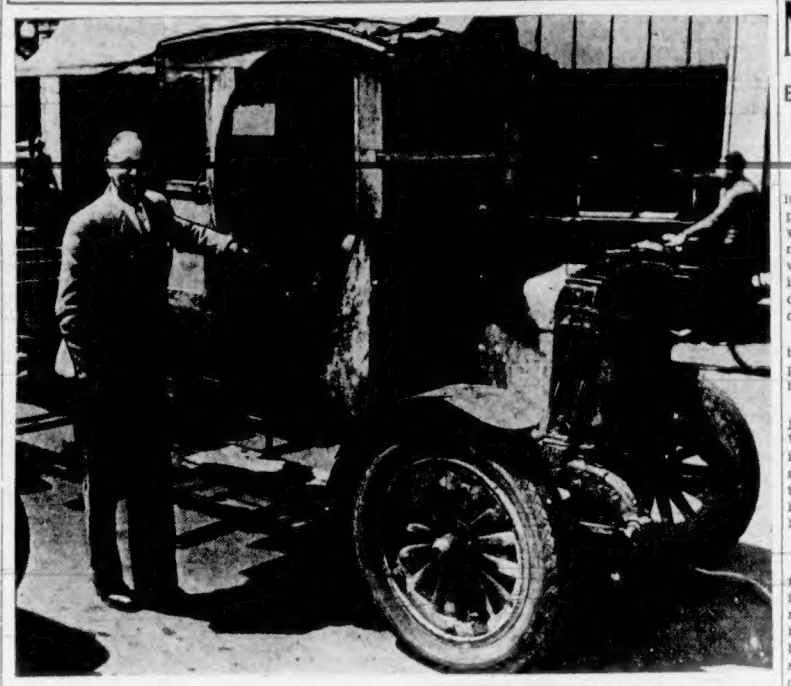
Percy Black (Con., Cumberland) said he regretted the necessity of reducing the gasoline ration granted tourists entering Canada.

Mr. Howe said he regretted that the value of gasoline ration coupons in the Maritimes had to be cut to two gallons, and it was hoped the conditions would be temporary.

"What can be done for the tourist beyond the four coupons that he is given at the border will depend on circumstances," he added.

"If he has come to Canada simply for pleasure driving, I doubt if anything further can be done for him, but if he is traveling to a Summer home in Canada, it is probable that provision can be made to take him to his home and back again by giving the proper information to the nearest representative of the oil controller." (G. R. Cotrelle, of Toronto, is the oil controller.)

To Return to Germany as Munitions



THE truck pictured above, made in Germany by the Hufmann firm about 1912, and used as a passenger bus by the Dominion Hotel in 1924 and 1925, may shortly be returned to the Nazis in the form of shells and bullets, for it has been given to the Salvage Corps of British Columbia for scrapping by Chris Newton, of Mill Bay, on whose property the vehicle has stood for several years. Standing beside the truck is C. C. Guthrie, of Cowichan Bay, who guided the derelict to Victoria. It was towed here yesterday by another truck driven by Miss Dawson-Thomas, of Cowichan Bay, and its component parts will prove a valuable addition to the stockpile of material which the Salvage Corps of British Columbia is accumulating at the Cloverdale Avenue car barn, now being used as its main collecting centre.

ments of war supplies to Russia had caught up to the terms of the Moscow protocol—the agreement signed in Moscow several months ago by Russian, American and British officials — the President countered by saying they are coming along all right.

From other sources, it was learned today that while these shipments have been increased steadily in recent weeks, they are still behind the American quotas set in the Moscow agreement, due primarily to shipping deficiences and the natural disturbances caused by the entry of the United States into the war.

BRITISH SHIPMENTS

It also was learned here that British shipments not only are up to schedule but slightly ahead, and that Canadian quotas, particularly for tanks, which were included in the British totals, also have been filled promptly.

Shipping is the big bottleneck in supplying Russia. Ships can make only three round trips a year between New York and Murmansk and Archangel, Russia's northern ports, and the number of naval vessels—American, Canadian and British—on convoy duty in the North Atlantic is small considering the traffic to be escorted back and forth.

Perhaps the best measure of Anglo-American aid to Russia is the number of warships and planes Hitler has been forced to concentrate in Norway to intercept the convoy despite the demands of the eastern front.

SHORTAGE IS NOW GENERAL

British Columbia Industry Feeling Strain From Expansion of Work

Difficulties experienced in the lumber and logging industry in completing work crews in the mills and woods are actual, and also are common to many types of industry, provincial labor officials said yesterday, in comment on a reported shortage of labor in the forest product industries of this province.

Adam Bell, deputy minister of labor, with a lifetime of experience in placement work in British Columbia, put it this way:

"The truth is that there are more jobs than there are men to fill them. What is happening in the logging industry is a reflection of the situation in nearly all industries other than express war contracts. There is, we believe, a real shortage in the logging industry.

SOLUTION SOUGHT

"If a remedy is to be found, it is the Dominion that will have to find it. As a matter of fact, there is reason to believe that the Dominion is moving towards a solution now by various means, including the restriction of transfers between various types of employment. The shortage, however, is actual, and it may be acute at some points."

No figures were available under the Provincial Department of Labor for the labor shortage in any particular industry; but the condition as a whole had been noted for some time past. Expressed in another form, more men are at work in British Columbia now than at any other period in the province's history. The attraction to high-waged work in wartime contracts, however, is creating strain at other points; or so provincial reports have appeared to indicate.

NEEDS OF WAR TO COME FIRST

Tire-Rationing Order Bans Purchase of Tires for Luxury Carriers

OTTAWA, May 15 (CP)—Under the tire-rationing order made public yesterday, no usable tires or tubes may be purchased for trucks engaged chiefly in carrying luxury goods, the Munitions and Supply Department announced tonight.

Except for deliveries of ice and fuel, trucks carrying commodities direct to the home will not be allowed new tires. This means, the Department said, no new tires for bread, milk, grocery, fruit and other home deliveries.

The ninety-six tire rationing representatinves have been advised to refuse permits for new tires, retreaded tires, new tubes, or retreading services, for trucks used principally in the transportation of wines, beers, liquors, soft drinks, cosmetics, confectionery, tobaccos, sporting goods, advertising demonstrators and their equipment, jewelry, furs and other luxury articles or services.

WAR NEEDS FIRST

"Every application for a tire permit will be considered strictly in relation to the war needs of Canada," said Supplies Controller Alan H. Williamson. "Those are known to operate trucks at illegal speeds, who load excessively, who fail to take adequate care of their tires, who waste gasoline, or who use their trucks for picnic or other pleasure trips, may be denied permits."

Mr. Williamson said economy of truck mileage will be insisted on, in co-operation with James Stewart, services administrator of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

"Why, for example, should six competing dairies serve substantially the same routes in picking up milk from the farmers?" Mr. Williamson asked. "Why should two drivers cover the same route to pick up cattle? Why should gasoline be cross-hauled between two points, or why should any two or more firms unnecessarily duplicate their haulage?

SITUATION GRAVE

"The situation is grave. We shall not permit the habits or customs of business to stand in the way of the rubber saving that must be achieved.

"Always the rationing representatives will bear in mind that precious rubber is still being used in the manufacture of truck tires, and that every such tire released means one less tire for the armed services."

Mr. Williamson emphasized that the 2,000 tire dealers throughout Canada, who are authorized to sell used tires to those on the eligible list, must observe the same discretion as the tire rationing representatives.

Every possible effort would be made to keep common carriers in operation as long as the war may last. Transports and other common carriers rolling on rubber handle approximately 11 per cent of Canada's freight.

"If they were taken off the road, the burden on the railroads, especially in Central Ontario, would be greater than the railways could handle," Mr. Williamson said.

Veterans to Meet

A general meeting of the 31st Alberta Battalion Association will be held at 8 o'clock Monday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Y. Baldwin, at 2010 Stanley Avenue. Wives of members are also asked to attend to carry out formation of a women's auxiliary.

THE YEAR OF YEARS

It is too early yet to appraise the meaning of the increasing hostilities on the Eastern Front. For months past, and while in the grip of Winter, the Russian armies retained the intiative and carried on an offensive which removed immediate threats to Leningrad, Moscow and the Caucasus. All through that period hints were thrown out from Berlin that with the coming of Spring the Nazis would again take up the task of pushing their invasion deeper into Russia, and the date for the beginning of the new onslaught was set for the opening weeks in May. So well had this propaganda been planned that it became a matter taken for granted in the capitals of the United Nations, possibly with the exception of Moscow, which was engaged in taking measures designed to anticipate whatever the Germans had in store.

With the opening weeks of May, fighting has become greatly intensified. The Germans have launched a heavy attack in the Kerch region of the Crimea and by strength of numbers have won some successes. That is obviously a part of a campaign to liquidate the situation in the Crimea with the object of placing the enemy in a more favorable situation for an all-out attack on the Caucasus and its oil resources. Almost coincidental with the battle of Kerch the Russians, on their part, have developed an offensive on a grander scale with Kharkov as the immediate objective. That is a key position essential to any successful drive by the enemy into the Caucasus. If it is wrested from the Nazis and an advance made westwards the position of the German and Rumanian troops fighting in the Crimea could be made very precarious. The extent of the offensive now being undertaken by the troops under Marshal Timoshenko is not known. It may develop southwards to Taganrog and drive along the coast of the Sea of Azov. What is certain is that it has been devised to relieve the situation in the Crimea.

In an article written last month by Mr. J. L. Garvin in The Scottish Sunday Express, Glasgow, he said; "This year and no other is singled out from the countless years of time to see a crisis for mankind far more momentous than any former passage of human fortunes." He says this because he believes that it is now or never for both Herr Hitler and Premier Tojo, that in this year's campaigns they must win all or lose all. In other words, the curtain is going up on the development of fighting on a a major scale in all vital directions. Here is Mr. Garvin's summary of what is in prospect; "At one time in one year we shall have to think of the battle of Russia, the inseparable battle for India and China, the battle for the Middle East, the battle for the life of Australia and New Zealand. At sea, the battles for the Pacific and the Indian Oceans will count for no less than the battles of the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. Over all else, in every region, rages the crucial battle of the air."

Mr. Garvin believes 10,000,000 men will be engaged on the Eastern Front, "with unprecedented masses of tanks, planes and artillery." The comforting note he strikes is that "the Red Armies are confident in their sacrificial resolve, their new numbers, their great leadership, and, not least, in the skill now gained by a terrible education. Superhuman efforts have built up surprising reserves of equipment." As well, however, Mr. Garvin says; "As never yet, the Nazis during the Winter have driven their colossal manufacturing machine to throw in superior masses of material on the chief sectors. To cast into the balance the fullest weight of American and British supplies may be the factor of life and death for the common cause this year."

What is happening in Russia is the prelude to what Mr. Garvin predicts. So that the United Nations can maintain this world-wide war Mr. Garvin says that "the prior need is for ships, ships, ships. More millions of tonnage are required for every world-wide purpose of battle, transport, supply. For America and Britain alike maritime power is the mother of all power. More and more of it is essential to the decisive use of armies and the air weapon. . . . This is the year of years. I have dared to call it nothing less than the pinch of eternity for free civilization with all its hopes and dreams for the future of man and the soul of the world."

UNDAUNTED MALTA

Who may doubt that it was the deep-seated conviction of his faith in the Almighty that sustained General Sir William Dobbie during the terrible months when Malta was subjected to daily, almost hourly bombardment. He has resigned as Governor and Commander-in-Chief of that island fortress and no one has deserved more the honor bestowed upon him by His Majesty and the honor, too, awarded to the island where he comanded the defences so long and so gallantly. The importance of this bastion of the Mediterranean is stressed by the fact that his successor is Field Marshal Lord Gort, to whom Mr. Churchill paid such high tribute in his broadcast of last Sunday.

Malta, during the course of the present war, has had over 2,500 air alerts. Its area, including the island of Gozo and the inhabited rock of Comino, is less than one-sixth of that of Greater London. Fifty-five thousand houses have been destroyed by the successive bombardments. Hospitals, churches, old land marks, have been wrecked, yet the spirit of the people, despite heavy casualties, has remained undaunted, and Malta has struck back at the enemy again and again, for it is from there that the Royal Air Force takes off for attacks on the enemy's bases in Sicily and Southern Italy. It uses its air strength also against Axis shipping in the Mediterranean and against bases in Libya, and it does all this while still putting up what has proved one of the most remarkable defences against air attack in all the history of such warfare. The Italians have christened Malta—"L'Isola del Diavolo." Perhaps there is added significance to its importance as a bastion of sea power that the Germans should have put Air Marshal Kesselring in command of the Axis air fleet in the Mediterranean. It was he commanded the Luftwaffe during the Battle of Britain in 1940-1941.

No tribute to Malta is adequate without unrestricted praise for its civil population. This has been given by Sir William Dobbie, who is the best judge of all, and it is given as well by The Times, London, when that paper says; "The civil population has borne the destruction of venerated monuments, the discomforts of long nights in shelters, and the horrors of bombardment with a stubborn courage that no small community has surpassed since this war began. This stout-hearted people is living up to its traditions of loyalty and valor. The Maltese people was behind the Knights in that great siege which, more even than Lepanto, marked the turning-point in the struggle of the Mediterranean nations against Turkish sea power. It is behind the garrison in the longer and sterner struggle for the command of the Mediterranean which we are waging against the Axis."

THE PARISH PUMP

Mr. C. G. Power, Canada's Air Minister, says that he does not know when he has had a greater sense of frustration than in his attempts to "Canadianize" the Royal Canadian Air Force overseas. Mr. Power is not happy in his use of terms and this is probably because he is not clear in his thoughts. What is the significance, if any, of this clumsy neologism, "Canadianize?" Everyone knows what is meant by "naturalize." In law it means to receive an alien into the condition and to invest him with the rights and privileges of a natural-born subject. Does Mr. Power think of the members of the Royal Canadian Air Force overseas as having a status other than, or less than, Canadian? Naturalization implies the renunciation of a former nationality. Does "Canadianization" imply the renunciation of one allegiance or status and the assumption of another? What is it that Mr. Power wishes the Canadian airmen to renounce and to what does he want them to be converted?

On being questioned in the House of Commons Mr. Power said that much might be done to "group Canadians together" and "identify them as Canadians." This remark adds exactly nothing to his former statement and fails to clarify it in the least degree. It throws no light whatever upon his proposed mysterious process of "Canadianizing" the Canadians.

It is unfortunate that Mr. Power can find no better outlet for his energies than trying to introduce occasions for controversy between the fighting forces of the Empire. He says that he would like to see the Canadian airmen with the same "status" as that held by American airmen now going to Britain. Is it possible that Mr. Power does not realize that our airmen enjoy a status that in law and in fact is superior to that of our good American allies? Does he not know that the reason for this is the very excellent one that it is not a separate and distinct status?

Mr. Power has been guilty of an indiscretion at the very least. He should keep away from the parish pump. He should strive for united sentiment and co-operation and avoid these idly busy and divisive controversies.

INEQUALITY OF WAGES

Perhaps it goes on everywhere in democratic countries, at least it does in Canada and Great Britain—the inequality of wages paid in wartime industries for the services rendered. There is a wastage of wages. In Great Britain it has been drawn attention to by Sir Wardlaw Milne, M.P., in the course of the debate on production in the House of Commons, but so far nothing on the subject appears to have come to light at Ottawa. Sir Wardlaw told the House;

"It is actually not so much the rate of wages about which the worker is concerned. Machinery to fix or negotiate is already in existence. It is the inequality of wages. It is what he sees going on all around him. It is the waste of wages and people getting paid for not doing their full share, and, objectionable as it may be to quote it, one of the finest remarks made in this war has been altered and paraphrased by the workers themselves to suit conditions they see around them. They have put it up in their own works, in one case, as follows; 'Never has so much been paid to so many for so little.' It is a terrible thing that that should be said, and it has been by the workers themselves."

Mr. R. B. Hanson, Conservative Leader in the House of Commons, says he never sees The Canada Gazette. He "occasionally" gets copies of the orders-in-council passed under the War Measures Act. Evidently there is not much done to popularize The Canada Gazette when it escapes the notice of the leader of one of the parties in Parliament. As to orders-in-council, all orders-in-council, the supposition always has been that copies are invariably furnished to the Leader of the Opposition. Moreover, all orders-in-council should automatically appear in The Canada Gazette. This is all the more important now when practically all the administration of the country is done by orders-in-council rather than through legislation passed by Parliament.

BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord:
He is tramping out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword.
His truth is marching on.

I have seen Him in the watch-fires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I can read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps.
His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel, writ in burnished rows of steel:
"As ye deal with My contemners, so with you My grace shall deal;
Let the Hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with His heel,
Since God is marching on."

He hath sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat:
O, be swift, my soul, to answer Him! Be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me:
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

—Julia Ward Howe.

Note and Comment

By SANDHAM GRAVES

You very seldom hear of them, and yet they have seen more and harder fighting in this war than almost any other group of equivalent numerical strength. They were the men who ran the Germans out of Louvain at the point of the bayonet. They fought and fell back, and fought and fell back, in the Low Countries in the toughest rear-guard actions known to any military history. They waited their turn on the beaches at Dunkerque, and brought their wounded off with them. They fought through Greece to the southern islands; pressed, over-run and under fire for nights and days without ceasing. They went through it all again at Crete. They fought in Malaya, from Burma to Singapore; and in Burma, from Rangoon to the border of Assam. Their whole portion in thirty months has been fighting; and they have never complained—the British regulars.

A retreat is the hardest task known in the whole science of war. Only the stoutest-hearted of men can stand up under it. In retirement, morale is stretched to its breaking point; everything, from munitions to men, is in favor of the enemy. When that enemy is numerically stronger, equipped with full arms and armor, attended by legions of dive bombers as in a modern engagement, the hazards rise in geometrical progression for every mile traversed. Yet, British regulars fought under those conditions, and worse, in most of the seaboard countries in Northern, Western and Southern Europe, and in North and East Africa as well. A retreat is not a military honor, it does not go down on the battle colors; and yet these were retreats that will go down in history as victories; the blood, toil and sweat that purchased time for free nations to reply to outright aggression.

Most often you will hear them referred to simply as "the British regulars." On rare occasions, one or two famous old regiments will be mentioned; regiments with battle honors going back to the days of the old Crimea and beyond. Their Clarks are "Nobbies," their Murphies "Spuds," and their Joneses "Taffys," as they always have been. Some wear the splash at the nape of the neck, others have their buttons arranged in peculiar order down the front of the tunic, some wear their kilts in a special manner; but in battle dress they all look alike. Only their officers could tell them apart in the field. Some day the world will want a complete, and authenticated, list of those regiments—the die-hards of 1939, 1940, 1941 and 1942. They are the counterpart of the "Contemptibles" of 1914, the Mons men of this war. Any partial list would be an injustice to them all; for together they kept open a door for liberty that was very nearly closed in the face of the whole world.

We hear much of what Dominion forces have done, or attempted in this war, and rightly so. The Aussies who danced to their death to the tune of "The Wizard of Oz"; the Canucks who flew on to a German bridge in the fire of massed guns; the South Africans who charged like demons in the desert, with the sun at 122 degrees; the Sikhs, the Gurkhas, and the hillmen of the Near and Middle East. We hear of the Free French, the Free Poles, the Free Czechs, the Free Netherlanders, and the stout-hearted men of Greece; but when it comes to the last ditch stand, quite often all we are told is that it was made, under great odds, by "the British regulars." With disparagement to none, God bless "the British regulars." One day we will want their names—to cherish!

The time used is Pacific Standard for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the table, the tide rises or falls continuously during two successive tidal periods without turning.

To find the depth of water on the sill at the Esquimalt Drydock at any tide, add 30 feet to the height of high water as above given.

Blood and Thunder

(From The Times, London)

In an article in the current issue of The Times Literary Supplement, Mr. Montague Summers—a theatrical historian with an enviable gift of discussing trifles seriously—records the centenary of that celebrated piece, "Sweeney Todd or the Demon Barber of Fleet Street," which was first produced, at the Britannia Theatre, Hoxton, in 1842. The author was George Dibdin Pitt, but, as in most melodramas, the theme had a previous literary history, and since then the play has been many times rewritten. In a world in which copyright meant as little as it did in that of the small theatres of the past century, this is only what one would expect of so dramatic a story as that of the villainous barber, who tipped his customers from his barber's chair straight into a cellar under the shop, there to murder and rob them. In some versions he is in league with the pie-woman next door, but even without that full-flavored touch the blood-thirsty Sweeney, constantly stropping a razor on the palm of his hand and muttering "I'll polish 'em off!" is an unforgettable figure.

UNCRITICAL ENJOYMENT

There can be few audiences to which "Sweeney Todd" could be played seriously today—and to act it in any other spirit is not to act it at all. Yet even a dozen years ago there were a number of theatres at which such plays could still evoke the old, genuine, uncritical enjoyment, and before the general spread of the cinematograph many of the more plebeian theatres relied on melodrama for their staple fare. Who, that lived in a provincial town thirty or forty years ago, does not remember how, every Thursday, the next week's theatre posters appeared on the walls? Fine exciting things they were, too, with plenty of garish color and thrilling incident—and it is pleasant to think that, since a collection of them was given to the Victoria and Albert Museum a few years ago, at least some sample specimens have been preserved. One week the hoardings would show the hunted convict cowering in the lonely hut among the marshes, while warders with rifles scoured the country round; next Thursday there might appear a lovely and virtuous young woman, lying bound to the railway line, while an express train thundered toward her; and in the following week, perhaps, the hero hung by one hand to a bridge over a ravine, while a ruffian slashed at his fingers with an axe. It is true that, in the theatre itself, which seldom had great scenic resources, these promised thrills were apt to limp and even to fall a little flat. But that detracted scarcely at all from the fascination exercised by each succeeding play.

DECLAMATORY SPEECHES

Sweeney Todd, East Lynne, One of the Best, A Beautiful Fiend (a powerful piece this, in which the B.F., elegantly gowned and smoking a cigarette, lashed the manacled hero with a knout), Maria Marten or the Murder in the Red Barn, The Worst Woman in London, and, best of all, The Silver King—how the names stick in the memory. And not the names only, but also some of the grand, declamatory speeches—"O God, put back the clock and give me yesterday," or "No, no, you shall not take my Victoria Cross," or again, "Dead! And never called me mother!"—which marked the most stirring moments and met with the loudest applause. For thousands of people such plays remained the only plays, and to many others, who later passed on to more subtle dramatic enjoyments, they gave a first taste for the theatre.—They were crude enough, these old melodramas, but at least they gave people a vision of a world in which right and wrong were never confused, in which sorrow was in the end alleviated, cruelty overthrown, virtue honored, and courage rewarded. In that world truths and ideals were over-emphasized and too highly colored, but was it such a bad world to offer for the admiration of simple people?

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

From The Daily Colonist of May 16, 1892

Early Closing—A petition was yesterday in circulation calling upon the proprietors of tin and hardware stores to close every evening during the Summer months at 6 o'clock. The document was signed by the majority of the trade, and the principal concerns were accordingly closed at 6 yesterday evening.

The Long-Promised Improvement—The New York Opera Company having gone to smash in Astoria, and no other combinations being booked for a couple of weeks at The Victoria, the management announce that the remodeling of the house, by tearing out the little boxes and adding 300 seats in the pit, will be undertaken next week. The improvements have long been promised.

The Water Rising—That the snow in the mountains of the Upper Country is fast disappearing is evidenced by the fact that within the past few days the water in the Columbia River has risen considerably. Wednesday night last, the rise was about nine inches. The steamers are now running regularly, and a large number of prospectors are going into the Kootenay country by way of Revelstoke.

The Observation Car

By G.B.

Vancouver is endeavoring to solve the stove fuel problem. The civic fuel committee in charge of Alderman Charles Jones has sent out the following questionnaire to householders, "What type of fuel do you use, sawdust, wood, coal or oil? What amount do you believe you will need between September 1 and April 1? What storage capacity have you in your home?" . . . Heard on the air, "I have found a military worm." "What do you mean?" "Well, here it is in the apple core." . . . Although Tobacconist Martin is a city slicker he has an interest in a farm in Interior British Columbia. He told us yesterday that peanuts have successfully been grown around Osoyoos in the southern end of Okanagan Valley, and might be developed commercially to take the place of supplies formerly received from China and Spain. He also pointed out that "hoodoo" cantaloupes grown about Osoyoos had a flavor far surpassing those from California, but were not in public favor because the flesh when ripe was a delicate green color instead of the usual orange or pink . . . Note from a reader, "I do not see how district air raid practices can be efficient if persons are asked to blackout their homes but street lights are left blazing. I also think members of the A.R.P. should learn to take care of their incidents and handle injured persons in total darkness." . . . A West Virginia dentical variety of synthetic rubber tist claims to have developed a prac- from natural gas, coal, wood and grain. We are afraid it will be a long time before the general public sees a synthetic tire . . . A brusque lieutenant remarked to a soldier at an Island camp, "Did you sweep out my office?" The private replied, "No." Then the officer snorted, "No what?" With perfect nonchalance the soldier answered, "No broom."

No letter to the Editor will be inserted except over the proper signature and address of the writer. This rule admits of no exception. No letter should exceed 300 words in length.

INDIFFERENCE

Sir,—I have noticed, especially during this week of the Red Cross drive when different regiments have been parading through the streets, the absolute indifference of the people who are onlookers. Not a cheer or a clap is given these men. Surely to goodness, when we know that these men are going overseas to save us from a ruthless enemy, the least we can do is to give them a good hand-clap. After all, it does not cost us anything. I have heard it said that the Americans go in for too much flag waving. I think that if we went in for a little bit more it would do us no harm.

W. E. PERRY.

OF HISTORICAL INTEREST

Sir,—I read with pleasure, on May 13, an article on your editorial page entitled "Of Historical Interest," the subject-matter of which was what part Sir John Colborne and his battalion played in defeating the Old Guard of Napoleon.

To thoroughly understand the situation for either the military-wise or the average civilian, we must go back to the situation of the opposing armies before the Battle of Waterloo. Wellington's army was astride the main road from Quatre Bras to Brussels, in the path of Napoleon who desired, above all things, to separate the British Army from the Prussians under Marshal Blucher. Napoleon was also astride the same main road three-quarters of a mile south of Wellington, but his army did not have so wide a front as he was determined to split Wellington's army and so demoralize it before Blucher could come to his assistance.

We must go still further back to Sir Arthur Wellesley's journey to India, where his fighting career was to begin. This study and theory, later proved on many battlefields, was that a "strong line of battle" was superior to a "column of attack." Napoleon's favorite mode of attack. A line of battle could bring more guns and muskets into action at one time than an "army in column"—a narrower front.

From 11 a.m. on June 18, 1815, after a severe bombardment of the British front, French infantry and cavalry were constantly charging the British front astride the Brussels road. Thirteen cavalry charges were driven back and a score of infantry charges, some mixed. And the French artillery was always in action when the defeated soldiers of Napoleon retired to their own lines, or the remnants of them.

About 6 p.m. the Young Guard was sent forward and defeated also. Then the Old Guard (which dies but does not surrender) was sent as a last resort, and the last reserves of Napoleon.

Wellington had himself made fresh dispositions of his reserves and placed General Maitland's Brigade of English Guards and General Adam's Brigade to replace the exhausted troops who had fought so long. Also, on the right of these two brigades, was Sir John Colborne's battalion, 52nd Regiment of Foot. Naturally, when the Old Guard of Napoleon advanced (how many I have not been able to find out, but certainly much more than a battalion; perhaps 5,000 men) they looked very formidable in their tall military headgear and all tall, picked men.

However, when they reached the British cannon and musketry fire they attempted to deploy, but on the right of the British Sir John Colborne was ordered by Wellington to left wheel his battalion so as to attack the left flank of the Old Guard and so confuse them. Sir John Colborne hesitated to carry out this order at first, as it was leaving an opening in the British front and he may have thought his battalion was a small force for such an operation, but the Iron Duke waved him forward and shouted: "Go on, Colborne! Go on! They won't stand." And the enemy (the Old Guard) did not stand.

There were also field guns on both flanks of the two brigades. There would be at least three battalions to each of the two brigades facing the advancing Old Guard. When they all got into action, front and flanks, the Old Guard turned to retreat, and at this point Wellington ordered the whole line to advance, and they had gone almost a mile when the Prussians, under Marshal Blucher, came up in force on Wellington's left flank and they carried on the pursuit of the retreating French all night, or as long as they could. Wellington's army stopped to help their wounded comrades and to get some rest.

At no time during the past twenty-five years have I seen the name of Port Colborne in a newspaper but what I think of it, or repeat to myself, "Go on Colborne! Go on! They won't stand." Certainly the citizens of Port Colborne have a right to be proud of the name of their city, named after one of Wellington's officers; but it was the British Army that defeated Napoleon's Old Guard; not just one battalion.

I was not an eyewitness of the Battle of Waterloo. Did not see the battleground till 103 years later, but I have several times seen Wellington's ivory-handled sword and other personal articles, and the skeleton of Marengo, Napoleon's white horse, which he rode at Waterloo for the last time—all in the United Service Museum in London—and have stood bareheaded at the foot of Wellington's resting-place twice. All was quiet and peaceful there, but as I turned away to leave the sacred spot I fancied I heard an echo of that ringing command to Sir John Colborne, which millions of Londoners and citizens of other bombed cities of the British Isles have heard, and it has braced them to carry on in spite of bombing and all others costs and privations.

SILK TOPPER GOES

LONDON, May 15 (CP).—The tall silk hat, traditional headgear of Britain's bank messengers, is the latest victim of war conditions. An announcement today said the topper is being exchanged for "a plebian but more serviceable cap." A bank official explained: "Bank messengers carry steel helmets and if there should be need to use them it would be rather difficult to pack a topper away. Then there's the matter of economizing in the use of materials."

DANGER IN TOW

TAVERNIER, Fla., May 15 (AP).—A fisherman, believing he had a lost navigation buoy in tow, hauled a floating mine ashore in the Florida Keys near here today. A demolition expert later rendered the explosive harmless, and it was towed back to sea and sunk. Naval headquarters at Key West, about seventy-five miles south of Tavernier, declined to comment.

BODY RECOVERED

BROOKS, Alta., May 15 (CP).—Two farmer neighbors today discovered the body of George H. Smith, who was drowned Tuesday in the Bow River near Eyremore. The body was found fifteen miles from the place where Smith was swept out of his wagon by the flood.

The course of safety is an excellent one to follow, but there are times when it is vital to leave this beaten path and make forays into uncharted country. Note today's hand:

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
Pass	Double (final bid)

Although East's double was of the hair-trigger variety, it was not illogical considering that South had shown a decided disposition to sign off after each of North's rebids. Unfortunately, the defence was not up to par.

West opened the diamond ten and East captured the jack. East made the good return of a low heart. Declarer ducked and West won with the queen. West returned a diamond, removing dummy's ace. The heart jack then was led, and East, to avoid an eventual throw-in play, went right up with the ace and returned his remaining heart. (East's idea was to retain his third diamond as an exit card.) Declarer won the heart return and led a low club to the ten spot. East won, and now triumphantly exited with his carefully preserved diamond. Declarer won and led a club to the ace, then ruffed a club. East's king ingloriously fell, and now declarer did not have to lose a spade trick. The defenders took in all only two trumps, one diamond and one club, and the doubled contract was fulfilled.

It should have required no great farsightedness on East's part to see that dummy's club suit was very dangerous and that it would be vital to go out after a spade trick. Declarer was marked with the diamond queen, because if West had held that card, he would have returned a heart (after taking his heart queen) to prevent a diamond ruff in dummy. Thus, when the club jack was knocked out, East should have returned a spade, trusting West for the queen. If declarer had that card, there was nothing to be done about it. The pressing danger was that the club suit would be established for several discards.

It is worth noting that a spade lead by West, after taking the heart queen would be futile. Declarer could set up a spade trick and thereby avoid the club loser. The spade lead had to come from East after one club trick was "home."

THREE DEAD BY ACCIDENT

Island Logger Succumbs in Strange Manner When Chewing Gum Displaced

A piece of chewing gum, which lodged in his respiratory tract and produced convulsions, was blamed for the accidental death of Anselm Enlund, thirty-five, a naturalized Canadian of Finnish extraction, who was stricken at the Hill Logging Company, eleven miles from Cowichan Lake on May 4 last, according to a coroner's report to the Provincial Police yesterday. The case was without British Columbia precedent, so far as it was known.

Enlund, working as a faller in the woods, had brought down one tree and was setting about the felling of another when he suddenly stopped work. His companions saw the man writhe, and then collapse. They worked over him, but failed to revive him; and death followed in a short period of time.

STOPPED AIR PASSAGES

The post-mortem revealed that a piece of chewing gum one and three-quarters inches long had lodged in his respiratory tract; causing a collapse of the lungs, and a stoppage of the flow of blood to the heart. Death was described as accidental by a coroner's jury reviewing the circumstances.

Born in Finland, but a naturalized citizen of this country, Anselm Enlund is survived by his widow and a nine-year-old son, living at Cowichan Lake.

OTHER ACCIDENTS

From Alert Bay the Provincial Police reported the death of Edward Poulton, a faller for the Port McNeill Logging Company, who was struck by a falling snag in lumber operations on Thursday afternoon. A widow survived at Sointula.

Other reports stated Arthur Halsets, forty-five, a head brakeman for Bloedel, Stewart & Welch operations at Franklin River, is missing and believed drowned, as a result of a fall from a float into deep water, while returning with a party to camp on Thursday evening. A sister, Mrs. Cugwich, lives at Butte, Montana. Efforts were being made to recover the body.

BOOTLEGGER IS GIVING TROUBLE

London Police in Campaign Against Peddlers of Illicit Liquor

LONDON, May 15 (CP)—The police campaign against peddlers of typical bootleg "hooch," blamed for fifteen deaths, kept the British public occupied this week, along with the Government's refusal to ration beer and its restrictions on luxury meals.

The source of much of the bootleg liquor was said to be wood alcohol, apparently syphoned from drums at docks awaiting transportation.

Other types were believed to be methylated spirits chemically treated to look like whisky, or a drink made in back-alley stills from such ingredients as potatoes, malting barley, sugar, yeast and raisins for coloring.

HEAVILY TAXED

The reason for the bootleg? Probably the fact that legal liquor is hard to obtain and is heavily taxed.

Britain's beer drinkers cheered the Government's refusal to ration beer on the grounds that such doling out "would cause widespread discontent and a probable decline in industrial production."

An added official comment was that much of the quantity of beer being drunk in wartime Britain is water, anyway.

A move was understood on foot to set up national machinery regulating wages and working conditions throughout the catering trades, where a tipping system rather than wage contracts was reported to have been responsible for some of the lowest pay in the country.

ECONOMY PLAN

A plan to economize on manpower, factory space and use of transportation facilities in food factories was expected to be announced soon.

Along the same lines, one-fourth of the country's 500 creameries making cheese and other milk products will be closed until the end of the war.

The Government pulled the country's belt tighter still with a call for a voluntary shutdown of 30 per cent of the present bacon factories by June, to be increased to 50 per cent at a later date.

NO DINING CARS

People who must travel by train have been told they had better take their own food in the future; the dining cars will be discontinued.

The Transport Ministry, in another proposal for curtailment of railroad operations was considering compelling persons not in war industry to get permits before making long-distance journeys.

LONDON, May 15 (CP)—Flt. Sgt. Foster Kerr, of South Mountain, Ont., has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal for bravery shown in a recent air attack on Rostock, the British Broadcasting Corporation said today. As gunner of one of the British aircraft, he shot down an attacking plane after his own machine managed to duck inside the heavy anti-aircraft fire outside the city.

Red Cross Drive Now Totals $60,903 in Victoria And District

Workers canvassing Victoria and district on behalf of the Canadian Red Cross Society's drive for $90,000, turned in a total of $11,150.43 yesterday, bringing to $60,903.43, or over two-thirds of the objective—the amount so far collected.

The committee in charge of the campaign here has asked the auditing staff to turn in its Saturday reports before 1 o'clock this afternoon.

In response to many requests, the Canadian Red Cross Society points out again that Allied prisoners of war in Germany receive one bowl of soup, one-fifth of a loaf of bread, a portion of margarine and either a little jam, cheese or sausage for their noon meal, and that food for breakfast or for an evening meal has to come from the parcels which the society provides.

These parcels cost $2.50 each. The Canadian Red Cross has so far shipped overseas 40,000 parcels weekly, but the society has now been asked to double the number shipped per week.

One of the most appreciated of the Canadian Red Cross Society's services is the supplying of clothing, comforts, food and, when necessary, accommodation for members of the merchant marine of the United Nations. Seamen of the merchant marine who have lost all their possessions in the torpedoing of their ships find a willing and practical friend in the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross at the port at which they land.

Hon. Mr. Justice P. H. Gordon, executive chairman of the National Red Cross committee, will speak Monday, May 18, at 2:15 p.m., in the Y.W.C.A. The meeting is open to the public. Mr. Justice Gordon, who is an authority on the work of the Canadian Red Cross throughout the world, will also be heard over radio station CBR, Vancouver, from 2:45 to 3 p.m., on Sunday, May 17.

He will make an important announcement concerning the present national Red Cross drive.

From 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. today, the new distributing centre of the Victoria and district Canadian Red Cross Society at 1162 McClure Street will hold "open house," which the public is cordially invited to attend. They will see how the immense amount of surgical and medical material and comforts is sorted and prepared for distribution to ships and to all parts of the world.

The average amount of electricity in a lightning flash—about thirty coulombs—is far less than the amount that can be charged into a storage battery.

APPEARANCES CAN DECEIVE

The gallant young naval officer was getting on very well with the blue-eyed and sweetly fragile damsel at the dance. Naturally he suggested a spot of food. She accepted, and they strolled into the supper-room.

Presently the officer noticed that one waiter was staring at his partner rather too intently. At last he tackled the man.

"Don't you know it's very rude to stare at ladies?" he snapped.

"Sorry, sir," was the meek reply, "but it isn't rudeness—it's admiration, sir. This is the sixth time she's been down to supper tonight!"

RESEMBLANCE

A slightly hilarious guest at a party embraced a strange woman by mistake. He apologized, "Excuse me madame," he said, "but I thought you were my wife."

"You're a nice sort of husband for any woman to have, you clumsy, tipsy brute," said the woman, angrily.

"There," exclaimed the convivial one, triumphantly, "you talk like her, too."

HELPING TO SAVE LIVES OF SEAMEN

SHEFFIELD, England, May 16 (CP)—Twelve conscientious objectors, granted deferment on religious or humanitarian grounds, have volunteered to endure torments and sufferings of shipwrecked seamen to help science save life at sea.

In the first of a series of experiments the "conchies" and Dr. Kenneth Mellanby, thirty-four-year-old Sheffield University lecturer, lived eighty-four hours on lifeboat rations of ships' biscuits, dried pulverized meat, malted milk tablets and chocolate. They drank when it became obvious that to remain without water any longer would cause permanent injury.

"I believe we shall save our merchant sailors and navy men much suffering," Dr. Mellanby said. "When the experiments have been completed the results will be reported to a committee of the Medical Research Council, who will advise the Government."

The average depth of the ocean below sea level is 12,450 feet.

The originality and enterprise of four Victoria children, Elizabeth and Jane Ridewood, Meg Jones and John Munday, has resulted in receipts amounting to $10 collected for the Red Cross Society during the past ten days. The children have established the "J.E.M. Curb Service" on St. Charles Street, near their homes, and for the modest sum of two cents, passers-by may be refreshed with lime juice or lemonade. The venture was entirely the children's own, and their licence, obtained from Red Cross headquarters, is proudly displayed at the side of their improvised "mobile canteen." Jane Ridewood and Johnny Munday are shown with glasses in hand, while Meg Jones (left) and Elizabeth Ridewood are seated in the cart.

Murder on the Avenue

By CAROLYN WELLS

(Copyright, 1942, by Carolyn Wells)

CHAPTER XLI

She took refuge in an exceedingly dignified attitude and cold, precise tones.

"I was present," she said, "when Mr. Herrick was questioned as to his movements that night. His story was all that was needed to convince me he committed the dreadful deed."

"You have it clearly in your mind, then!"—Stone looked straight at her.—"Just the exact order in which those four young men entered and left the room where the lady was. I am glad of that, and I will ask you to detail it to me, for I am in charge of this case, and it is difficult to get a straightforward account of that episode."

Emmy made several unnecessary motions that proved her uncertainty if not embarrassment.

"Please tell me," Stone's pleasant voice repeated, "It will be positive proof, whereas now we are in doubt. If you will give me a short account of the young men's recitals and your own decision therefrom, I will not trouble you further."

"I will do nothing of the sort, Mr. Stone. Since you have chosen to intrude on this saddened household, you show yourself an unwelcome busybody. And I will ask you to put an end to your visit."

"To you, yes, Miss McCleod. I will excuse you and wait your brother. And I thank you for the welcome information you have given me—"

"Not knowingly, perhaps, but I gathered much that you didn't mean to tell me. Good day."

Stone rose, and actually bowed her from the room. She gave him a venomous look and went haughtily away.

After a few moments, McCleod came in, apparently ignorant of his sister's interview with Stone.

With his most ingratiating manner, Stone told Hugh of his own connection with the case, and asked for a brief description of the questioning of the four young suspects.

"I know, Mr. McCleod, that if, as I have reason to think, the murderer was not Mr. Herrick, but one of the other men present with him, you will be glad to have Mr. Herrick freed and the other man arrested. That is why I am asking you to tell me of the attitude, rather than the words of those other three men, who, with Herrick, listened to Captain Raynor's questions."

"I am sorry, Mr. Stone, but you are asking too much of a sick man. I am under the doctor's care, and to detail the conversation you ask would be a great drain on my nerves. You can get it all from the stenographic reports, in the hands of the police, and I advise you to pursue that course."

"Thank you, Mr. McCleod. I will do so. I will not detain you, but I am anxious to see the room where the crime took place."

So dominating was Fleming Stone's personality, that the rugged Scotsman left the room, and sent Dickson, the valet, down to see the urbane visitor.

"Good morning, Dickson," Stone said, affably, and the valet knew at once that here was a man who commanded respect, deference and liking.

"Mr. Stone?" he asked, looking into the grey eyes. "Mr. McCleod bids me to take you to the room you wish to see. Will you come with me?"

Stone followed him up the marble staircase, with something of the feeling he had when following guides through ancestral castles abroad. There was nothing ancestral-looking about this ultra-modern apartment, but Stone thought he had never seen one where so much money had been spent with such good taste.

Dickson took him to the guest room. It had been restored to its immaculate guest room order, and Stone looked with interest at the chaise longue, with its chromium frame and its chartreuse satin upholstery.

"This couch stood right here, when Mrs. McCleod was found?" Stone said.

"Yes, sir, the blessed lady."

"And so young Herrick killed her. You wouldn't think it to look at him. Do you know him, Dickson?"

"Yes, sir, as I know all the men who came here."

Fleming Stone was sensitive to the faintest quiver in a voice or the slightest trembling of an eyelid, if they were caused by embarrassment or self-consciousness.

He lowered his tone, and spoke earnestly.

"Did you have any reason to suspect him especially, or—especially to doubt his guilt?"

"Mr. Stone, it is not my place to have an opinion on the matter, but I have a — well, a sort of reason to think it could not have been Mr. Herrick who killed Mrs. McCleod."

"Yes? And you gave this reason to Captain Raynor?"

"No, sir. He did not ask me."

"I wish you would tell it to me, Dickson, and I will advise you!"

Dickson looked up and saw such gentleness and friendliness in Stone's eyes, that he could not resist.

"I'm glad to tell you, sir. It is only that I saw Mrs. McCleod and Mr. Herrick together just before they went upstairs."

"Where were they?"

"In a little hall, downstairs, sir. It is where the little elevator comes down. Mrs. McCleod and Mr. Herrick came from the dance room there."

"Did they see you?"

"She did, but he didn't. She laughed and put her finger to her lip, for me to make no sound. Then she urged him into the elevator—"

"Urged him?"

"Yes, sir. He did not want to go, but she coaxed him. I'm telling you, sir, because it weighs on me. He was trying to get away from her, and she was teasing him to stay by her. Well, then, sir, they went upstairs together, in her little elevator. He was just trying to get away from her—he was annoyed at her attentions, but not angry! He didn't kill her, he only wanted her to leave him alone!"

An optimist is she who thinks she can go through these tireless days without foot trouble.

GOODMAN—PYNN

Pynn, Cedar Hill Road, became the bride of Sergeant Victor Norman Goodman, R.C.A., only son of Mrs. F. Goodman, 1051 Princess Avenue. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a turquoise blue redingote ensemble with beige accessories and a corsage bouquet of gardenias. Mrs. Harry Robinson, Jr., sister of the bridegroom, attended her in a navy blue ensemble with a corsage bouquet of rosebuds, and Mr. Albert Williams was best man. At an informal reception at the home of the bride's parents, which was bright with flowers, the guests were welcomed by Mrs. Pynn and Mrs. Goodman, who were both dressed in navy blue with shoulder sprays of roses and bouvardia. The supper table, which was covered with a lace cloth, was decorated with vases of sweet peas and lighted white tapers, and centred with the cake. After a honeymoon in Vancouver, Sergeant and Mrs. Goodman will return to Victoria to live.

FULTON—CAMERON

Rev. J. L. W. McLean officiated at the wedding of Helen Dingwall, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cameron, 2734 Avebury Avenue, and Sergt.-Observer William Fulton, R.C.A.F., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Fulton, Mount Lehman, B.C., which took place at Hollywood Presbyterian Hall at 8 o'clock last evening. The wedding music was played by Miss Jean Hyslop, and the soloist was Miss Muriel Pottinger, who sang "All Joy Be Thine" as the register was being signed. During the ceremony the couple stood beneath an arch of roses before a background of white lilac and white viburnum. The bride was given away by her father and wore a turquoise blue crepe redingote ensemble with beige accessories and carried a bouquet of lily of the valley, sweet peas and forget-me-nots showered with sweetheart roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Catherine Cameron, and Miss Phyllis Bayliss, who were dressed alike in dusty rose frocks with brown and navy blue accessories, respectively, and carried Colonial bouquets of pansies and sweetheart roses. Mr. Alexander Fulton supported his brother, and Mr. E. M. Whyte was an usher. An informal reception was held in the hall after the service where the guests were welcomed by Mrs. Cameron in a turquoise green dress with brown accessories and a corsage bouquet of Talisman roses and by Mrs. Fulton, in navy blue with pale pink roses. A buffet supper was served, and Mrs. J. G. Burnett and Mrs. E. M. Whyte poured tea and coffee at a table centred with the cake and decorated with vases of sweetheart roses and pink tapers. Mr. F. W. Bayliss proposed the toast to the bride. Sergt.-Observer and Mrs. Fulton left at midnight for Vancouver en route to the Okanagan, their ultimate destination being uncertain. WOMEN'S CORPS HIGHLY PRAISED

Efficiency of Units Stationed Here Impresses Gen. H. F. G. Letson

Praise for the progress and high degree of efficiency of members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps was voiced by Major-General H. F. G. Letson, M.C., last night, after an inspection of units stationed in the Work Point and Gordon Head areas.

"I was impressed by their soldierly bearing, their general deportment and their esprit de corps, and I am convinced that, comparatively speaking, they are now on equal footing with our soldiers."

General Letson, adjutant-general of the Canadian Army, in Victoria in the course of a Western inspection tour, saw units in training at several military establishments and conferred with officials at M.D. 11 headquarters.

FIRST HAND STUDY

"I was given a good opportunity to see at first hand the problems that affect my branch," the adjutant-general said.

Expressing keen interest in the progress of the Women's Army Corps, he said that its expansion will depend on the availability of trained women and on how soon others can be trained.

"Eventually, wherever a woman can do a job as well as a fit man, she will replace an active service man to permit the utmost utilization of manpower," the general explained.

"This release of men will not only extend to overseas service but to industries at home, where women will replace men in factories, munitions plants and in other activities. In other words, we are going into total war."

METHOD OF SELECTION

Asked how members of the Women's Army Corps would be chosen for service overseas, General Letson said selection would be made on a voluntary basis for the most part, but that specific capacities and qualifications would be considered also.

"If we want a certain number of women for a certain job we will call on them," he explained. "Women enlist for service abroad as well as at home, and they are all keen on going overseas."

Before returning to Vancouver, General Letson will go to Nanaimo today, where he will inspect the military camp and hospital.

What Today Means

"TAURUS"

If May 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m., from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. and from 10:30 p.m. until midnight.

The better humor people are in the more irritable they will become if, for any reason, ill-natured people vent their spleen on them, so May 16 will be a good day for grouches to go into retirement—and stay there. Inability to make up their minds quickly will cause many people to be disappointed on this date, especially where social activities are involved. Seeking to be witty at someone else's expense will be a demonstration of exceedingly poor judgment and may result in many friendships being strained. Resist the temptation to try to do two things at the same time if you expect to get anything done satisfactorily. Procrastination will be responsible for much of the inconvenience to which people will be subjected because of having to wait for others to keep engagements, so endeavor to be prompt for all your appointments on this date. Married and engaged couples, and those whose matrimonial ambitions seem likely to be realized, should avoid being ruthlessly blunt in their remarks on this day.

If you are a woman and May 16 is your birthday, you probably reflect a beautiful character, a wholesome mind and a kind heart. You ought to have a knack for doing domestic duties with ease and efficiency. You probably have the gift of making a look convey a world of meaning, and many of your actions are apt to speak louder than your words. While you probably are inclined to be serious-minded, you have a recognized depth of humor that makes you a welcomed addition to any social gathering. As a modiste, demonstrator, interior decorator, restaurant operator, musician, artist, teacher, or sales agent, you ought to find your services appreciated and well paid. Your selection of a husband probably will reflect your good judgment.

The child born on May 16 can be helped to develop a strong, spiritual nature and an exceptionally sweet disposition. Parental guidance frequently can keep children born on this date from manifesting the slightest degree of selfishness. These youngsters usually are ambitious, hard workers and dependable.

If you are a man and May 16 is your natal day, exercise discretion and thriftiness and maintain the high quality of your work, and you will find success crowning your efforts. As an agriculturist, horticulturist, chemist, dentist, journalist, clergyman, educator, business manager, author, theatrical man, or in some artistic endeavor, you may win many laurels and find yourself free from financial cares.

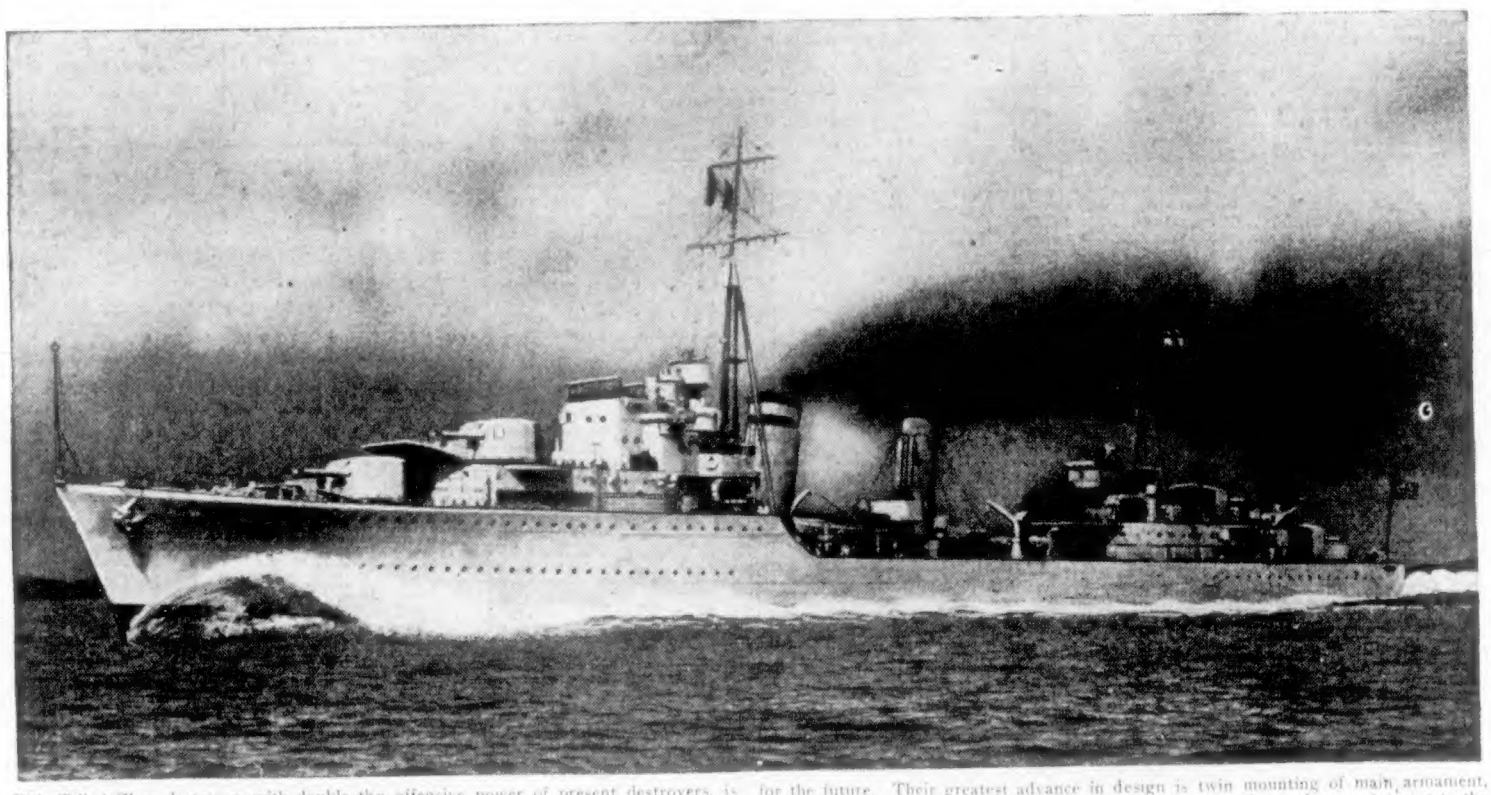
Royal Canadian Naval College Opens Doors to First Class in October

High on the bridge of a destroyer the captain watches a signalman send a message to another ship on the anchorage. Officers will be trained at Royal Canadian Naval College, opening in October for boys 16 to 17 years and nine months with junior matriculation.

A naval whaler, equally handy under sail or oar, is shown in the lagoon on the Naval College grounds. Main building appears in the background, more than a mile from shore.

An officer on the upper bridge of a destroyer is studying deflection measurements for accurate firing of a torpedo. Applications from qualified young men seeking careers in the navy will be accepted by the secretary of the Naval Board, Ottawa, up to May 31



This Tribal Class destroyer, with double the offensive power of present destroyers, is one of the ships which will be manned by men trained at the new Naval College at Esquimalt, B.C. The Tribal type is coming into delivery this year, with many building for the future. Their greatest advance in design is twin mounting of main armament, 4.7-inch guns hurling a double weight of broadside. Applicants for appointment to the new college will be selected on the basis of examination standings and an interview.

Students at the new college must familiarize themselves with modern weapons. This officer is assembling the tail of a 2-inch torpedo, which travels at 40 miles per hour.

Every officer aboard a Canadian destroyer is a specialist in gunnery, torpedoes or navigation. In foreground at right of this group in the wardroom of the Saguenay is Lieut. Philip E. Haddon, then captain of the ship, now executive officer of the college.

TRADITION, woven into the fabric of British naval history by Drake, Frobisher and Nelson, endures today in the spirit of the men who fight in the Canadian navy. It represents a quality of mind and heart which distinguishes the sailors of the British Commonwealth from those of the Axis.

Here is what Vice-Admiral Nelles, Chief of Canada's Naval Staff, says of that distinction:

"They are a short-term navy and we are a long-term navy.

"Those hundreds of years of British naval tradition are paying us good, solid dividends now."

Then, too, there is the matter of training. "It is more thorough," the admiral says, "and lasts longer. A mature officer in the British Navy has vast technical training behind him—years of work in a closely-knit organization.

"The German Navy, and the Italian Navy for that matter, lack the tradition, the length of service and the sailor's instinct. All the mechanical skill in the world isn't going to save them."

In October Canada will open a new Naval College where the British tradition of the sea and the high standards of training will be maintained. Its commanding officer will be Commander John M. Grant, R.C.N. His executive officer will be Lieut. Philip E. Haddon, who has been captain of the destroyer Saguenay. Director of studies will be Lieut.-Commander Kenneth Ketchum, former headmaster of St. Andrew's College.

Entrance requirements will be high. The first fifty of these future naval officers joining for the two years' course must be between the ages of sixteen years and seventeen years and nine months on July 1, with a junior matriculation in mathematics, physics or chemistry, history, English and another modern language.

For this year only, an additional fifty will be entered for a one-year course. Because the training period is shorter these will have to present higher credentials. They must have senior matriculation in the same subjects and be between the ages of seventeen years and eighteen years and nine months on July 1. To select the first 100 entrants to the new Naval College a senior Naval Officers board will interview candidates personally.

Young officers in training receive instruction in layout of modern warships. The model is a heavy cruiser. The navy will select 100 career men this year for special courses. Information on the new Naval College may be obtained from Naval Secretary, Ottawa.

SENT OUT 2,423 BOOKS IN 1941

TORONTO, May 15.—Annual report of the Church Bible and Prayer Book Society (Anglican) reveals that there were many places in Canada last year in urgent need of books for their worship services. The society distributed 2,423 prayer books, hymn books and Bibles to missions and Sunday schools throughout the country.

Eleven grants were made for the Sunday school work of the church, two to institutions, one each to an internment camp and an Indian mission, and the balance to missions for the benefit of at least seventy congregations.

Letters that the society received from many out-of-the-way places in the dioceses, for example, of Athabaska, Cariboo, Kootenay and Qu'Appelle, testify to the great need for the maintenance of this work.

Of the books distributed, 1,016 were used books, donated by interested people. The society is a non-profit organization, financed by public subscription. Since its organization, 2,830 grants have been made to missions and Sunday schools throughout Canada.

Will Discuss Mortals and Immortals

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him; and He shall bring it to pass" (Psalms xxxvii, 5).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Human birth, growth, maturity and decay are as the grass springing from the soil with beautiful green blades, afterwards to wither and return to its native nothingness. This mortal seeming is temporal; it never merges into immortal being, but finally disappears, and immortal man, spiritual and eternal, is found to be the real man."

SQUADRON IN HECTIC TILT

Canadians Emerge From Dogfight Over French Coast Without Scratch

By LOUIS HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, May 15 (CP).—An R.C.A.F. Spitfire squadron emerged from a recent dogfight over the French coast with two "probables" and one damaged enemy aircraft added to its record.

Chalking up the scores for the Canadians in a brief but hectic tilt were Sqdn. Ldr. R. B. Newton, an Englishman, and P.O. Wallace McLeod, of Regina, one of the squadron's veteran pilots. The flyers escaped without a scratch, but two of their Spitfires were damaged slightly.

Both of the new flight commanders, Flt. Lt. David Ramsay, of Calgary, who spent three months with the R.A.F. wing in Russia, and David Smith, of Toronto, saw action, and others in the engagement included Pilot Officers Paris Eakins, of Minnedosa, Man., a former Winnipeg newspaperman; William Teule, of Port Arthur, and Sgt. Gordon Lapp, of Medicine Hat, Alta.

Newton and McLeod each were credited with one Focke-Wulf 190, probably destroyed, while the Regina airman also damaged a Messerschmitt 109. One of Newton's cannon was put out of action by a direct hit and another aircraft was hit in the wing by anti-aircraft fire.

DIVING AIRCRAFT

McLeod's double score resulted from a mix-up in which he went to the rescue of Lapp. First, the enemy attacked in force from all sides as Spitfires escorted Hurri-bombers towards their targets in Le Touquet area. Dogfights broke out all over and the air was filled with diving aircraft.

"I glued my eyes on one ME109," McLeod reported afterwards, "and when I got within 250 yards I put one long burst into him. It must have been at least four or five seconds. Immediately I saw red flashes in the body of his aircraft. Before I could follow this up my attention was attracted by four FW190's appearing above us, working towards the sun."

"They were looking for 'sucker' bait, and one fastened on Sgt. Lapp's tail, about fifty yards back of him. So I swung into line about fifty yards behind the Focke-Wulf, and just as he let go with tracer bullets at Lapp, I opened up on him."

Then McLeod remembered the three other Nazis and found they had disappeared. When he turned again the fourth was not in sight, "and since he had only been at 500 feet, I don't know where he could have gone but into the sea."

Meanwhile, Newton was having a private feud with another FW190. The C.O., who was formerly a flight commander in another Canadian squadron, put four bursts into the German who fell apparently out of control.

TERRIFIC CLANK

"I watched him down to under 1,000 feet," he said. "Suddenly there was a terrific clank as somebody put a shot into my wing and smashed one of my cannon."

On the flight home, both Newton and P.O. Dennis Connolly, of Benton, N.B., took time to circle over pilots who were in the water, until rescue boats were attracted.

A Canadian Wellington bomber squadron whose members consider themselves as "continental commuters" with a special interest in German industrial centres, reported after a recent attack on Hamburg that it was "hot as Hades."

The squadron, under the leadership of Wing Cmdr. Johnny Fauquier, of Ottawa, a former bush pilot, encountered heavy concentrations of anti-aircraft fire, but all the bombers returned safely.

Sgt. Pilot W. L. Scott, of Yorkton, Sask., in a Wellington, reported that after his bombs had been dropped another machine dumped incendiaries on the bursts.

Those taking part in the raid included Flt. Sgt. J. D. Alley, Port Arthur.

The Empire State Building in New York has been struck by lightning sixty-eight times in three years.

REQUIRE MORE SPECIALISTS

New Classes for Training of Air Personnel to Be Started

OTTAWA, May 15 (CP).—Details of new specialized classes of air crew personnel were disclosed today by Air Minister Power.

Up to the present, the Royal Canadian Air Force in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan schools has been training three specialists—the pilot, the air observer and the wireless operator-air gunner. Now different specialists are required, of which ten will be trained in Canada, necessitating considerable changes in training syllabus and the organization of classes in the training schools.

The pilots for single-engine planes are men of dash. The pilots for twin-engine machines are more of a painstaking type. Co-pilots are those not with sufficient experience to be given charge of an aircraft. A pilot's mate is capable of assisting the pilot in the controls and in engine maintenance.

The air observer's job under the old system was navigation, bomb aiming, photography and emergency gun operation. This job has been divided into air observer and navigator. A navigator is described as a good mathematician—precise, with plenty of endurance.

Other jobs are air bombers, wireless operators, wireless observers skilled in photography, wireless air gunners, radio observers and flight engineers.

Radio observers who have to use radio locators and flight engineers capable of making temporary repairs to engines during flight are not being trained in Canada, but the other ten types of specialists now are, or soon will be, trained here.

CANADA PRAISED FOR WAR CRAFT BUILDING

LONDON, May 15 (CP).—The "surprising development" of warship construction in Canada is praised in the latest edition of Janes' Fighting Ships, authoritative naval annual, just off the press.

A paragraph devoted to the British Dominions in the foreword says: "Some reference must be here made to the surprising development of warship building in th British Dominions overseas, especially in Canada. Sloops, corvettes and mine sweepers have been turned out in surprising numbers and several destroyers are also in hand."

YACHT RACES TODAY

JUMPED DURING VIOLENT STORM

Young Flyers Abandoned Plane and Parachuted To Ground Safely

TORONTO, May 15 (CP).—Three young Toronto flyers, members of the Royal Canadian Air Force and stationed at Malton Air Observers' School, took to their parachutes near Wardsville, Ont., late last night during a violent storm, No. 1 Air Training Command announced today. None was injured.

One of the trio, L.A.C. W. R. Boyce, told his mother he was badly shaken up, but he got up and walked away from his first parachute jump.

Officials said L.A.C. J. W. Gibson reported back to headquarters shortly after landing but that an all-night search was conducted for P.O. J. R. Bradley, who reported back to the training school this morning. No reason was given for the latter's delay in reporting and officials said P.O. Bradley's mother had been informed the flyer was missing.

Headquarters said the airmen were told to jump from the plane by J. W. Jenkins, a civilian pilot attached to the school, who landed the plane at London Airport.

The plane was on its way back to its base at Malton from a routine night navigation flight when it flew into a heavy storm halfway between Chatham and London.

Jenkins said he had made up his mind to jump after the boys, but a few minutes later he gained better control of the plane, and when he saw the lights of the Crumlin Airport he had no trouble landing safely.

Officers and men of the No. 1 Observers' School at Malton paid tribute to Jenkins' skill and heroism in ordering the boys to bail out and then landing the craft safely. The exploit was one of many in an adventurous career for the flyer, who fought with the Finns against the Russians in 1940.

Threat Over Rum Rations Is Stilled By Police Squad

SEATTLE, May 15 (AP).—A desertion threat by a group of British seamen whose rum rations had been reduced was quieted quickly here yesterday with the arrival of police called by the ship's master.

The captain told police the men had threatened to return to shore when he ordered the rum reduction because many of the seamen had returned from shore leave in a tipsy condition.

The appearance of six policemen stilled a riotous singing of songs on deck but brought forth a stream of taunts from the seamen. The desertion threat, however, was ended.

Yachtsmen Make Appeal for More Fuel Allowance

VANCOUVER, May 15 (CP).—Officials of the Burrard Yacht Club will press an appeal to the Dominion oil controller for permission to stock up motor boats and yachts in Vancouver with gasoline for possible emergency use to aid military or naval forces.

A meeting of club members last night was told that the oil controller is not in favor of allowing the boats any more than the regular ration, which members hold would be insufficient for use in an emergency.

F. Drew Pratt, vice-commodore of the club, said today that with the boats at Victoria and Nanaimo there would be a fleet of at least 800 boats.

THREE SURVIVORS OF MONTANA REACH LAND

MEXICO CITY, May 15 (AP). — A lifeboat carrying three survivors of the torpedoed steamship Montana has arrived at Isla de Mujeres (Isle of Women) off the tip of the Yucatan Peninsula, a dispatch to the newspaper Excelsior from Cozumel reported today.

The dispatch said the Montana was torpedoed May 9, but did not give the nationality of the vessel. It added the survivors said twenty-three others left the ship in another lifeboat but have not been seen since.

(Lloyd's Shipping Register lists a Norwegian 10,170-ton tanker Montana, built in 1940.)

Glancing Over Sport

TODAY'S SPORT MENU

Followers of sport can spend a...

there is boxing in the afternoon baseball in the evening and lacrosse tonight that is if they are that athletic...inclined.

Out at Macaulay Park the most important event...of the season will be run off after Victoria Mercantile Depot and Victoria Imperial crash in the local final of the Provincial Cup series. After getting away to a wobbly start the shipbuilders came to life and won seven successive matches which included the Jackson and Phoenix Cups. Nothing, any chances Coach Scotty McColl has additional strength ready for the provincial competition. In other words if he can take a powerful squad into action when the whistle sounds Victoria United did as well as expected in the Coast League this season for at times they found it hard to get players off work and from services to play. So from could Joe Power number the age and step up for their city fixtures. But it wasn't the hard luck record done under the circumstances. However the popular dentist hasn't been asleep at the switch for...ment bolstering his club to the extent that he feels confident the United will still be in the running for the cup when the final gong is sounded.

My selection VMD in two games. That should make it obvious to...knows what happens when I pick them.

Another VMD team will be at the spot today. They entered...squad in the Senior Amateur Baseball League will go up against the Eagles at the Athletic Park at the evening. To date the shipbuilders have gone to the post twice and came to the finishing wire a winner both times. Eagle will be pinning for the whipped boys and will toss their best hurler into the fray. Another win for the VMD.

Hoola will bring together the United Services and the Juniors at the Sports Centre. The returns no will be after their first game after the Juniors are hoping to make it two straight on the right side of the ledger. The juniors somehow or other will be the hardest to beat. I will take his word for it and pick them.

Those of you who enjoy watching cricket will have the opportunity this afternoon at two pitches. Out at the Beaver Hill ground the Five Cs and Adams will be at the wickets while Brentwood College is booked to meet University School at the Mount Tolmie ground. Both matches should be interesting.

Do you know that the 1,500 Canadian-held prisoners in Hongkong will receive sports and general recreation equipment in the very near future? The Sports Service League will send softballs, bat, soccer balls, deck tennis, quoits, decks of cards, chess, backgammon and other outdoor and indoor games. Because the prisoners are located in three different camps the shipments will be divided into separate cases, and will be sent through the Red Cross along with medicine, foodstuffs and clothing. The most famous training camp for boxing champions in the continent Pompton Lakes, New Jersey, where Joe Louis trained for so many of his bouts, is to be closed down. The owner, Dr. Bier is going to sell it to the United States Government for a women's defence workers camp. Interesting golf notes: Dick Hogan, owner of the Pasadena course at St. Petersburg, Florida, a resort that the entertainers have used as a winter base for war activities during the past two years, is dead. Sammy Angott Gets Off Floor to Beat Stolz in Title Mix

Retains World's Lightweight Championship by a "Whisker" Before Capacity House in the Garden—Down for Nine-Count in Third—Low Punches Cost Challenger Bout

By ED EYER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, May 15 — Sturdy Sammy Angott came up off the floor tonight to hang on to his world lightweight championship by a shade with a decision over Allie Stolz in a sizzling rough-and-tumble fifteen-rounder before a near capacity crowd in Madison Square Garden. Angott weighed 134, Stolz 134½.

Floored for a nine count with a right-hand shot in the third round and outpunched all the way, the rugged Washington Pa. and Louisville lightweight used his crowding, clinging style to come through by less than the width of a "whisker" over the stylish Newark boxer.

So close was it that the boss who followed the announcement of the decision, Mike Jacobs, said so loud the announcer could not introduce the next bout.

Two low punches cost Stolz the fight. He was penalized in the twelfth and fourteenth rounds for hitting Angott below the belt and for hitting out of bounds and that was enough to make the difference between the two gallant and well-conditioned boxers. At the finish the Associated Press scorecard gave seven rounds each, with two rounds called even.

POUNDS STOLZ' BODY

From start to finish the Jersey battler was a target for Angott's left to start off his one and sup in one sharp, cracking parade. Angott kept the fight at close range and Allie's best punches were short hooks to the body and uppercuts to the head.

Angott drove a two-fisted attack to the body in the seventh round and Stolz clinched frantically. Angott's left to the body in the eighth round and

DOCTORS CHECK KIDNEYS FIRST

Because they know that healthy Kidneys remove from the blood the waste matter—the excess acids and poisons, formed by the ever-changing human body as it de-ays and rebuilds itself. But if the Kidneys fail illness surely follows. Backache, Rheumatic Pains, Impure Blood, Lack of Energy, Too Frequent Urination, Sleeplessness, Headaches—all may result from faulty kidneys. As a health safeguard—as a wise precaution—regulate your kidneys frequently with Dodd's Kidney Pills—for over fifty years the favorite Kidney remedy—non-habit forming.

TIRE ORDER IS TAKEN CALMLY

Effect of Drastic Rationing Not Likely to Be Felt for Some Time Here

The general impression among Victoria motorists and dealers [that] the drastic rationing of tires announced in Ottawa yesterday would not be felt here for some time, and that the effect of the new order would be felt only gradually, was expressed by Motorists, Municipal Board and service officials, Saturday morning.

TIRES IN GOOD CONDITION

Most motorists in Victoria [and] Esquimalt have their tires in good condition, and will not be affected by the new order for some time, it was believed. Because Victoria [and] Esquimalt motorists [have] driven [fewer] miles [than] motorists [in] other [parts] of Canada, [and] because [of] the hilly [nature] of the [roads] here, it was [said] that [tires] would [last] longer [than] in other [parts].

JOB PARTLY PREVENTATIVE

Some [motorists] feel that [the] shortage [of] tires [and] tubes [is] a [job] partly preventative [for] accidents [and] [that] [the] [number] [of] [accidents] [will] [be] [reduced].

Airmen Parade in Aid of Red Cross

In a joint parade to publicize the current Red Cross drive for funds, units of the R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. stationed at Patricia Bay, marched through the downtown section of the city yesterday afternoon.

The officers and airmen, numbering 200, stopped at several points to give smart drill exhibitions, while the R.C.A.F. Band, under Bandmaster G. S. Austin, joined in the ceremonies with musical contributions.

En route from the starting point at Humboldt and Government Streets, stops were made at Yates and Blanshard Streets in front of the Library, on View Street between Douglas and Broad, and at Government and View Streets. Parading back to the starting point the contingent dispersed.

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

WARTIME PENNY

Young David had returned home after spending his Saturday penny. His mother asked him what he had bought.

"Sweets?"

"No, they hadn't any."

"Chewing gum?"

"No, they hadn't any of that, either."

"Well, what did you spend it on?" she persisted.

David, clutching a little card, replied: "Well, mummy, I got weighed!"

TRY IT, DADDY

Mr. Brown had taken his son to dinner at a friend's house. The small boy was hungry, and as the dinner did not make its appearance he began picking at his bread. At last he could stand the strain no longer. Turning to his father, he said quite audibly: "Daddy, why don't you kick up a row, like you do at home when the dinner isn't ready."

Stocks Showing Recovery Trend On Wall Street

NEW YORK, May 15 (AP).—Aside from an assortment of weak aviation issues, stocks generally exhibited quiet recovery leanings in today's market.

The principal air transport stocks dropped 1 to 3 points or so when it was announced the army would take over and actually operate or control all domestic passenger planes as a war measure.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was up .3 of a point at 33.8. Transfers totalled 257,120 shares compared with 278,857 Thursday.

Among the good rail performers was Great Northern, preferred, which was up 1 1-8. Directors declared a dividend of $1 on this issue against fifty cents disbursed in December.

Prominent on the revival were American Telephone, United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, Anaconda, Du Pont, International Harvester, Texas Co., General Foods, United States Distributing, preferred and Continental Can.

Air line issues on the offside included those of American, Eastern, United, and Transcontinental & Western. The last named, along with United Aircraft, went into new low ground for the year. Douglas Aircraft was off a point.

WHAT'S DOING ON THE LOCAL RETAIL PRODUCE MARKET

Supplies of local lettuce are expected to be sufficient next week to take the place of shipments from California.

All varieties of apples are being cleaned up quickly on the row and the only kind that is at all plentiful is the Winesap variety.

A fine quality of California strawberries is now arriving on the row at a reasonable price.

Manitoba potatoes are arriving in more abundant supplies and asparagus are arriving daily from Vancouver.

TOO BAD!

The proprietor of the country hotel looked worried, and when the policeman approached he said: "Yes, I know I'm open after hours, but it isn't my fault. I've got a man here who refuses to leave."

"Oh, you have, have you?" said the policeman. "We'll soon see about that."

He marched into the house, and going up to a shabby man sitting in a corner, deposited him outside before he could protest. Whereupon the proprietor quickly bolted and barred the doors.

"Now then," said the policeman, surveying the offender, "who are you that you should refuse to leave licensed premises?"

The shabby man spluttered with wrath.

"Who am I, you idiot? Why I'm the bailiff—that's who I am!"

NO GOOD

Two Irishmen were trying to remove a piece of rock lying in the roadway when an old lady passing stopped and watched them. Then she said: "Men, why not try blasting it?"

One of the men looked up and said: "Lady, we have tried every swear word we know, and yet we cannot move it."
